TURKEY DECLARES WAR WITH 500,000 TROOPS READY TO TAKE FIEL

Washington, Sept. 2.—With 500,000 troops mobilized and ready for instant action, Turkey has declared war on the allies. Authentic word to that effect was received here to-day.

The same authority declared the first move of the Turkish campaign would be directed simultaneously against Russia and England. A flying army would be sent into the Caucasus to strike the Russians on their flank and rear, the other army would go directly to Egypt.

"Turkey has struggled against giving up its neutrality," said a diplomat, friendly to the Turkish program to-night. "But she realizes that the present struggle, so far as she is concerned, is only the beginning of a greater and more devastating struggle among the nations of Europe. In the struggle she would have everything to lose, whether the allies won or Germany and Austria were victorious. Therefore, she must defend her own hand."

WHEN THE ALLIES WIN.

In the case of the allies winning the present struggle, the diplomat declared that Turkey would be dismembered in the apportionment of the spoils, and she would find herself shorn of much of her power when the second stage of the struggle began, and England, Germany, Austria and France joined hands to curb the Slav peoples.

"This will be an inevitable consequence of Russian victory," he asserted. "It is written and it is inevitable."

The same authority declared that there were many surprises in store for those who regarded Turkey's advent in the war as a mere incident. The intimation was that the Sublime Porte, with Germany's assistance, had not been idle in fomenting unrest and discontent among the Mohammedan soldiers of Great Britain and France. The charge has been made that this proselytizing work has been widespread and thoro. Agents of the German and Turkish governments are reported to have worked assiduously to transform the European struggle into a "holy war," so far as Turkey was concerned by stirring up the centuries-old feeling between Christians and Mussulmans.

It was acknowledged at the Turkish embassy that news of the declaration of war was expected momentarily. A Rustem Bey, the Turkish ambassador, frankly acknowledged that he would not be surprised if war had been declared, but that he had not heard directly from Constantinople in days.

PATRIOTIC MEETING

A patriotic meeting was held the town hall on Monday evening for the purpose of taking necessary steps to collect and distribute fund for the relief of distress, should casation require, in this municipi-on account of the war.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flags and pennants and pictures of King George.

The hall was pretty well filled the citizens, but on an occasion this kind it should have been pa-to the door and overflowing.

Mayor Alexander took the cand the following gentlemen were ced to the platform:—Rev. Mr. K-Thos. Symington, A. E. Paul, M.
Madole, Rev. Mr. Cragg, W. C. S-
Rev. Sellery, W. S. Herrington.

The Mayor shortly addressed the meeting explaining the object of gathering, and then called upon Municipal Clerk to read a resolupassed by the Municipal Council.

The resolution of the Council is as follows:

"That the Mayor and Reeve members of a Patriotic Commitee for the town of Napanee for the purpose of collecting and distribu-ing funds for the relief of distress in Municipality on account of the and that this Council do contribut the sum of $100.00 towards the fund and such further sums as it be required.

The following citizens then bri-addressed the meeting: Rev.
Kidd, M. S. Madole, W. S. Herr-ton, Rev. Cragg and others.

Moved by W. S. Herrington, sec-ed by Mr. Sellery, that we, as izens of Napanee, pledge ourselves take care of those of our citi-who are, or may become, needy dependent because of the war.

Moved by W. G. Wilson, secorby T. B. German, that in the opi-of this meeting the Council
the Town of Napanee should gi-the sum of $500.00 towards the riotic fund. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Madole, seconded
Mr. German, that Mrs. A. T. I-shaw and the following gentler
Mr. Travers, Mr. Reiffenstein, Checkley, Rev. Kidd, W. S. Herr-ton, Rev. Sellery, Rev. Cragg, I-Howard, F. W. Smith, Thos. Sym-ton and Father O'Connor act as committee in conjunction with Me-and Reeve to formulate a schem-detail for the collection and distri-tion of funds to present to ano meeting of citizens. Carried.

Moved by M. S. Madole, secorby F. F. Miller, that when we journe we stand adjourned at the of the Mayor.

A meeting of the Patriotic Com-tee appointed on Monday evening will be held in the Mayor's o-John street, to-day (Friday) at p.m.

A general meeting of the citiwill also be held in the Town on Thursday, Sept. 10th, at 8 sharp.

A LETTER FROM NANEE VOLUNTEER

Following is a letter from Robert Johnston, one of the Nananee contin-gent, at Valcartier Camp, sent to J.
J. Graham, Chief of Police.

Valcartier, Aug. 28th

Well! We have some time down at Valcartier Camp. Everybody said we would not be treated well, but everything here is fine. Lots to eat, plenty of hard work to do and still plenty of time to play. To-day we were issued a new outfit consisting of two pairs woollen socks, two suits Pen-man's woollen underwear, pair suspender, helmet, two heavy overshirts, two linen towels, pair brown handmade shoes, with sewed soles and soft leather uppers, prison made. It is very hot here. We received word that we would sail on Sept. 2nd. I saw all the 47th, and all are O. K. There are 21,000 volunteers at camp here
now. The government supplies us with newspapers. We also have wireless telephone and telegraph. Good water. Lots of Ford autos here. The camp is a regular city, with stores, and electric lights, where a couple of weeks ago was farm land. Remember me to all the boys at home.

ROBERT JOHNSTON.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of the Express.

A hand-bill left at my door step entitled "Red Cross Meeting," is a beautiful further example of the very earnest but undirected efforts of some of our good Nananee ladies which calls for some explanation.

Is the Red Cross Society for ladies only? And if so, is it to be used as is the present I.O.D.E., which by the way is doing excellent work along wrong lines never intended by its organizers, as a society or semi-society body to hold meetings once in a while in some small schoolhouse, which meeting is later written up as would society day at the Woodbine, hats and gowns coming in for most of the newspaper space allotted to their report. Why is the meeting held on a busy Saturday afternoon, when the largest and most influential class of our town life—those ladies who toil for their daily bread, and who furnish in brothers most of the men in the fighting lines, are prevented from being present.

Better drop this idea to a week night and organize a broader, more useful society, "The Voluntary Aid," which is the most recent British Society with definite objects and work laid out for both men and women too young to be called to the front, and chiefly for those men too old or but yet whose hearts are in the work though they may never have attended a military meeting at the Chateau
Laurier by special invitation of Hon.
the Col. Sam Hughes.

 Laurier by special invitation of Hon.
 the Col. Sam Hughes.

This may sound severe, but it is a serious problem we have to face, and though criticizing, it is well intentioned criticism. And now, as to our band, it has come in for much comment which yesterday's orders from headquarters surely show to have been undeserved. Instead of heralding to the ear—as our friends sugging the movements of our troops by bands and other sounds far less pleas-gested—such movements are to be kept strictly secret and quiet as possible.

It is late for the press and many flaws in the above letter may be found on a second reading. However,
 I am not to be therefore drawn into any controversy, but if my humble services and information are of any assistance to the ladies they will be gladly furnished. The Editor will disclose the writer's identity on application.

Further, why not consult the one man most necessary to our local welfare, the Colonel of our Local Regiment, Lt. Col. F. S. Ferguson? He

NO THOUGHT OF WAR.

Turkey Disclaims Any Intention of Entering the Arena.

LONDON, Sept. 1. — European statesmen are awaiting with the keenest anxiety the possible Turkish action. There are renewed indications that the Porte is preparing for action and taking sides with Germany. Foremost amongst the evidence cited is the report of great numbers of German officers and men passing to Turkey. If Turkey becomes engaged in the war it is wholly probable that Greece, too, will participate, as there is no doubt that Turkey's warlike operations will quickly turn against Greece, particularly in an effort to recover again the islands formerly Turkish but now Greek. At the Ottoman Embassy yesterday it was declared that Turkey has no intention whatever of going to war. The Em-

REAR ATTACK BEGINS

Troops Are Landed at Ostend and Marched South.

Large Force, Probably British, Has Been Put Ashore and More Expected—Intention Believed to Be to Attack Germans Through Belgium—Antwerp Despatch Reports Big Victory for French

ANTWERP, Sept. 1.—The all it is reported here, are about to attack the Germans in the rear through Belgium. It is said troops in large numbers, most probably British, landed at Ostend throughout the night. On forming in regiments, they marched through Ostend in a southerly direction.

The last of the troops, it is added, were ashore at four o'clock yesterday morning. A number of British troops were reported off Ostend yesterday and this may mean that more troops came ashore last night. Landing places and vicinity are closely guarded.

Advices From Sofia Tell of Big Battle at Zamose.

LONDON, Sept. 1. — A despatch from Rome says:

The Messagero publishes a telegram from Sofia, Bulgaria, which says the Austrians have suffered irreparable defeat at Zamose, in Eastern Poland, fifty miles southeast of Lublin.

The London News has the following from St. Petersburg: The Russian advance in all the theatres of operation continues successfully. Counters are reported in several places, but the heaviest fighting occurred in southern East Prussia and eastern Galicia.

In East Prussia the German troops after the defeat at Gumbinnen, followed the troops opposing the Russian army advancing from the south the line of Neidenburg, Ortelshagen, and were driven back. The Germans attempted to defend the line of Soldau-Allenstein-Bischofsburg, but after very fierce fighting on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, were forced to abandon their positions, the Russians occupying the garrison town of Allenstein.

The German losses were very heavy, particularly in the village of Muehlen, between Neidenburg and Tereode.

Waiting For Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. — It became known here last night that Italy is holding back her assistance against Austria and Germany awaiting only the action of Turkey. As soon as the Ottoman Empire is precipitated into the trouble, not only Italy, but Greece will seize this opportunity to attack their ancient enemy as well as the remaining two of the triple alliance.

RAMMED MINE LAYER.

British Cruiser First Gave Germans Time to Get To Safety.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—In confirmation of the story that mines have been laid in the North Sea by vessels disguised as neutral fishing boats, a woman who arrived at London from Bergen tells of the sinking of such a mine-layer by a British cruiser.

The ship upon which she was travelling found itself one morning close to a number of British cruisers, one of which had caught a German trawler flying the Norwegian flag and engaged in laying mines.

According to this woman the British commander gave the crew of the trawler three minutes in which to leave their vessel, and they came tumbling over the side of the passenger ship. Then first backing up a bit the cruiser rammed the offending trawler, and at the second attempt cut her in two and she went to the bottom.

Liquid Air as Explosive.

In Germany liquid air is being experimented with as a mine explosive. Mixed with aluminium powder and detonated it forms an explosive about two and a half times as powerful as black powder. Its peculiar advantage is that there are no deleterious fumes.

The German losses were very heavy, particularly in the village of Muhlen, between Neidenburg and Osterode.

There was panic in Danzig, large numbers of the population fleeing to Berlin, the remainder assisting in strengthening the fortifications. Part of the Russian army occupied crossings of the River Alle, driving the advanced detachments of the garrison back on Koenigsburg, a very strong fortress consisting of twelve large and eight smaller forts, connected by an excellent protective causeway. The siege of such a strong fortress, which has uninterrupted communications, which be a long and arduous task, necessitating the use of a very large number of troops.

FIRST DAY ENCOURAGING.

Sir John Gibson Opens Toronto Exhibition Before a Good Crowd.

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—Shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon Sir John Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, declared the Canadian National Exhibition open to the public after a stirring, patriotic speech, which frequently brought forth applause. He spoke of the manner in which the young men of Canada had responded to the call of the Empire in the hour of need.

Opening Day usually brings a crowd of invited guests, the number being in direct ratio with the importance of the guest of the occasion. This was not so yesterday, and there were several thousands making their way through the grounds and buildings before noon, and at 3 o'clock the numbers were rapidly increasing. Unfortunately, the shower, without which no Opening Day would be complete, kept some away, but even a that the attendance was encouraging.

Garrisoning Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 1. — All night long troops from the south and west of France have been arriving at the capital and proceeding by rail around the city to the locations in the encircling fortifications to which they have been assigned. There is great activity of the part of the municipal military administration in completing the details of the plans for the defence of Paris.

Louvain's Ruin Confirmed.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Arno Dosch, a magazine writer, arrived here yesterday and confirmed stories that Louvain, Belgium, set on fire by the Germans is now in a mass of ruins.

"Louvain is a pitiful ruin," he said, "I came through that city on my way out from Belgium and saw the smoking ruins. Only the big cathedral was visible above the smoke, and that may have gone later. The loss of the city is universally mourned in Belgium."

"I have no personal knowledge of the horrible atrocities reported from Belgium, and I am inclined to discredit most of the stories."

Storekeeper Drowned.

CHATHAM, Sept. 1. — Samue Brown, 25, a storekeeper of Mitchell's Bay, was drowned in Lake St Clair while returning home from the Log Cabin Inn. A heavy sea was running and Brown was engaged in bailing out the launch. He lost his balance and fell into the water.

NTWERP, Sept. 1.—The allies, reported here, are about to attack the Germans in the rear through Belgium. It is said troops in large numbers, most probably British, were landed at Ostend throughout the day. On forming in regiments, they marched through Ostend in a south-westerly direction.

At the last of the troops, it is added, landed ashore at four o'clock yesterday morning. A number of British transports were reported off Ostend yesterday and this may mean that more troops came ashore last night. The fighting places and vicinity are closely guarded.

It is reported here that Gen. Pau won a brilliant victory over 50,000 Germans near Perennes, in the department of Somme.

The enemy has abandoned the regions of Merckmontem and Vilvour—also the Huydenburg, Tremelon and Haecht provinces.

Aerschot the Germans are contesting entrenchments, which appear to represent a position for fall-back upon.

WILL RAISE MORE MEN

Four Battalions to Be Added to Canadian Forces.

Col. Hughes, at Valcartier Addressing Officers Says Strength Will Be Raised to Sixteen Battalions Instead of Twelve—Only 22,000 of Them Will Be Sent to Europe Just Now.

VALCARTIER CAMP, Que., Sept. 1. — From his charger, Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, addressed about 1,000 officers of the mobilization camp yesterday afternoon. The officers formed three sides of a hollow square northwest of the headquarters, and from an elevated position the Minister told them of some of the plans of the Government in connection with the first contingent and other contingents that may be formed. He said that there were now over 29,000 soldiers encamped, and only about 22,000 would comprise the first division. If they could not go at once they must not be altogether disappointed. There would be use for them, and they would all have their chance some time.

He stated that a part of the Canadian force would be used to garrison Bermuda and other places, and other regiments would be used in Canada as line of communication or to act as protective force here. Col. Williams, camp commandant, had been authorized to raise sixteen battalions instead of twelve, because of the great number of volunteers. He said that the present 29,000 men in camp were the best ever gathered in Canada. They had to get down to serious business and learn to shoot straight.

"I can excuse a man for almost anything if he can pick his man," said the colonel.

"Incompetent officers are worse than baggage, because they must be fed," he concluded.

The arrivals in camp yesterday were as follows: 6th Regt., Vancouver, 352; 6th Field Company Engineers, Vancouver, 124; 19th Company, C. A. S. C., 105; 103rd Regt., Calgary, 512; and Col. Calgary men, 10.

Five hundred Edmonton men arrived late last night and remained in the cars until the morning.

An official statement was given out by Col. Williams, camp commandant, last night, that the entire camp was being organized into four brigades, instead of three. Up to the present there have been twelve battalions; but, as Col. Hughes announced in his speech to the officers in the afternoon, four additional battalions are to be formed. This means the appointment of four battalion commanders and another brigadier, the present brigadier commanders being Col. Turner, V.C., D.S.O., and Lt.-Col. Mercer and Lt.-Col. Rutan.

Two men entered camp last evening without permits. They turned out to be whisky runners and were promptly placed under arrest and will be dealt with by the authorities today.

Militia Will Be Mobilized.

OTTAWA, Sept. 1. — Probably all of the Canadian militia, but certainly the greater portion of it will shortly be mobilized. This was the statement made at the Militia Department yesterday.

The object of the Department is twofold—to drill the militia and to increase the efficiency of the force in case it is required, also to stimulate recruiting.

Nobody Here!
Guess I'll help Myself!

TROOPS NOW ENGAGED

Big Battle Between Meuse and Rethel Still in Balance.

French War Office Says German Advance Is Being Stubbornly Resisted Between Verdun and Mezieres—Progress of German Right Wing Forces Allies to Drop Back—Victory at River Oise.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The following official statement was issued by the War Office last evening:

"The situation, in general, is actually as follows:

"First, in Vosges and in Lorraine, it must be remembered, our forces, which had taken the offensive at the beginning of the operations and driven the enemy outside of our frontiers, afterwards underwent serious checks. Before Sarreburg and in the region of Morhagne, where they encountered very solid defensive works, our forces were obliged to fall back, and to reform, one on Courmeille de Nancy and the other on the French Vosges.

"The Germans then assumed the offensive, but our troops, after having thrown them back upon their positions, resumed the offensive two days ago. This attack continues to make progress, although slowly. It is a veritable war of sieges, as each line of Neidenburg, Ortelburg, hannesburg, and were driven back e line of Soldau-Allenstein-Bischsburg, but after very fierce fighting on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, were forced to abandon their positions, the Russians occupying the prison town of Allenstein.

The German losses were very heavy, particularly in the village of Lublen, between Neidenburg and Osrode.

There was panic in Danzig, large numbers of the population fleeing to Berlin, the remainder assisting in strengthening the fortifications. Part of the Russian army occupied crossings of the River Alle, driving the advanced detachments of the garrison back on Koenigsburg, a very strong fortress consisting of twelve large and eight smaller forts, connected by an excellent protected roadway. The siege of such a strong fortress, which has uninterrupted sea communications, which be a long and arduous task, necessitating the use of a very large number of troops.

FIRST DAY ENCOURAGING.

John Gibson Opens Toronto Exhibition Before a Good Crowd.

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—Shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon Sir John Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, declared the Canadian National Exhibition open to the public, after a stirring, patriotic speech which frequently brought forth applause. He spoke of the manner in which the young men of Canada had responded to the call of the Empire in the hour of need.

Opening Day usually brings a crowd of invited guests, the number being in direct ratio with the importance of the guest of the occasion. This was not so yesterday, and there were several thousands making their way through the grounds and buildings before noon, and at 3 o'clock the numbers were rapidly increasing. Unfortunately, the shower, without which no Opening Day would be complete, kept some away, but even at the attendance was encouraging.

Garrisoning Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 1. — All night long troops from the south and west of France have been arriving at the capital and proceeding by rail around the city to the locations in the encircling fortifications to which they have been assigned. There is great activity on the part of the municipal military administration in completing the details of the plans for the defence of Paris.

Line of Louvain's Ruin Confirmed.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Arno Dosch, a magazine writer, arrived here yesterday and confirmed stories that Louvain, Belgium, set on fire by the Germans is now in a mass of ruins. "Louvain is a pitiful ruin," he said, "I came through that city on my way out from Belgium and saw the smoking ruins. Only the big cathedral was visible above the smoke, and that may have gone later. The loss of the city is universally mourned in Belgium."

"I have no personal knowledge of a horrible atrocities reported from Belgium, and I am inclined to discredit most of the stories."

Storekeeper Drowned.

CHATHAM, Sept. 1. — Samuel Olson, 25, a storekeeper of Mitchell's Bay, was drowned in Lake St. Clair while returning home from the Cabin Inn. A heavy sea was running and Brown was engaged in filling out the launch. He lost his balance and fell into the water.

promptly placed under arrest and will be dealt with by the authorities today.

Militia Will Be Mobilized.

OTTAWA, Sept. 1. — Probably all of the Canadian militia, but certainly the greater portion of it will shortly be mobilized. This was the statement made at the Militia Department yesterday.

The object of the Department is twofold—to drill the militia and to increase the efficiency of the force in case it is required, also to stimulate recruiting.

There are many more officers at Valcartier than are required, but it is probable that many of the officers will go as privates. Many officers did so when the Canadian contingent went to South Africa.

CHECKED HUGE FORCE.

Britons Numbering 70,000 Men Fought 200,000 Germans.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. — Seventy thousand British troops for the last three days held in check 200,000 German troops, until relieved by French reinforcements, according to information here to-day through neutral diplomats. The advices did not give the place of the battle.

Although the German forces broke through the British lines in many places, the English held their own until French reinforcements arrived, and then retired in good order. Military experts of the allied forces were reported to have been greatly encouraged by the manner in which the British forces withstood the superior forces of the enemy. The information came from Paris through diplomatic sources.

Dead Soldier's Comrade Arrested.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 1.—Following the accidental fatal shooting of Pte. William Sergeant, 19th Regiment, on guard duty on Welland Canal Saturday night, an arrest has been made of the soldier in whose hand the revolver rested when discharged.

The prisoner is Pte. Shaw, Elm street, St. Catharines, Sergeant's closest friend, according to their tent comrades.

The two young soldiers had been fooling with two revolvers left in the tent and that held by Shaw is said to have been the one in which the empty chamber was found. Shaw is heart broken; the mother of the victim is seriously ill in the General and Marine Hospital.

To Extend Gibson's Term.

OTTAWA, Sept. 1. — Although it is just a year now since the term of Sir John Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, was extended for a twelve-month, and the making of a new appointment is due, it is believed that the Government will induce Sir John Gibson to retain the position for the present at least, on account of the war and undesirability of making any more changes just now than are necessary.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. driven the enemy outside of our frontiers, afterwards underwent serious checks. Before Sarreburg and in the region of Morhagne, where they encountered very solid defensive works, our forces were obliged to fall back, and to reform, one on Courtenne de Nancy and the other on the French Vosges.

"The Germans then assumed the offensive, but our troops, after having thrown them back upon their positions, resumed the offensive two days ago. This attack continues to make progress, although slowly. It is a veritable war of sieges, as each position occupied is immediately fortified.

"This explains the slowness of our advance, which is, nevertheless, characterized each day by fresh local successes.

"Second, in the region of Nancy and southern Woivre, since the beginning of the campaign this section between Metz on the German side and Toul and Verdun on the French side has not been the theatre of important operations.

"Third — In the direction of the Meuse between Verdun and Mezieres, it will be remembered that the French forces took the offensive in the beginning towards Longwy, Neufchateau and Paliseul. The troops operating in the region of Spincourt and Longuyon have been able to check the enemy's army under the command of the German Crown Prince.

"In the regions of Neufchateau and Paliseul, on the other hand, certain of our troops have received partial checks, which obliged them to retire upon the Meuse without having their organization broken up. This retreating movement has compelled the forces operating in the neighborhood of Spincourt to withdraw also towards the Meuse.

"During the last few days the enemy has endeavored to spread out from the Meuse with considerable forces, but by a vigorous counter-offensive they were repelled with very great losses. In the meantime fresh forces of Germans advanced to the district of Rocroy, in the Ardennes, marching in the direction of Rethel. Now a general action is taking place between the Meuse and Rethel, and it is still impossible to see definitely the issue of this.

"Fourth—Operations in the north: The French and British forces originally took up positions in the Dinant and Charleroi country and at Mons. They endured several repulses, and the forcing of the Meuse by the Germans near Glivet, upon our flank, compelled our troops to retire.

"The Germans seek continually to move toward the west. It was under these conditions that our British allies, attacked by the enemy in greatly superior numbers in the region of Leateau and Cambrai, have withdrawn toward the south at the moment that our forces were operating in the district of Avesnes and Chimay. The retreating movement was prolonged during several days.

"In the meantime a general battle took place in the region of St. Quentin and Vervins, and at the same time in the Hams-Peronnes district. This battle was marked by an important success by our right, where we have thrown back the Prussian guard and the Tenth Army Corps into the Oise.

"Owing to the progress of the German right wing, where our adversaries have united their best corps, we have had to make a new retirement.

"On our right, after partial checks, we have taken the offensive and the enemy is retiring before us.

"In the centre we have had alternative checks and successes, but a general action is now being fought.

"On our left, by a series of circumstances which turned in favor of the TSINGTAU, Sept. 1.—A Japanese torpedo boat destroyer went ashore on Lientau Island during a fog on Sunday night. Yesterday the Tsingtau batteries attempted to shell the destroyer, but it was beyond their range. The Jaguar reported that the crew had abandoned the destroyer.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

SECRET OF THE PARIS HAT.

The Magic but Deadly Needle That Holds Its Spirit.

An American milliner seeking to learn what it is that makes the Paris hat so bewitching sought work in Paris and found it easily enough in one of the largest exporting houses, a name to conjure with. One afternoon saw her seated upon a bench with gay, chattering companions who radiated joy and sparkle on every side of her. Deft fingers flew with chattering tongues, confusing her by the bewildering creations called into being with breathless haste.

When night came the loneliness she dreaded did not come, so filled was her solitude by thoughts of all she had seen and heard, and so hard did her brain work to digest all the wonders. Would she, could she, in two months grasp the "something" and take it home to America, and in so doing reach another stepping stone in her career? The following morning found her seated upon her assigned bench. She had been told to come at 8 o'clock, and every clock and watch said 8—but she was alone. In half an hour her companions of yesterday began to stray in casually. Dull of eye and listlessly they came. No bubbling laugh, no gay chatter filled the room, and what was more surprising, no work was attempted. Some great calamity must have occurred! The whole nation must be suffering death and facing calamity. Questions failed to bring forth answers, and the puzzle grew. Were all her dreams to vanish with the night? The "house" must have failed was her final thought.

Around 10 or 11 o'clock the party broke up for dejeuner, and with their return came a breath of the spirit of the afternoon before. Increasing gaiety and brilliant ideas grew with the hours, and the wonder of it was more and more inexplicable. The mornings were one long torture, the afternoons a joy. One day all was revealed. A tiny hypodermic needle filled with the stuff that dreams are made of is the spirit of the Paris hat!

glutinous wash," being subsequently embodied in the famous one penny black postage label and its consort, the twopence blue, which made their debut in May, 1840, and were the progenitors of all adhesive postage stamps.

For three short years Great Britain enjoyed a monopoly of this novel and handy method of collecting postage, until in July, 1843, the enlightened empire of Brazil followed suit with a series of unprepossessing adhesive labels of native manufacture, adorned with large numerals of value in place of a design.

In 1847 the United States entered the field with two beautifully engraved portraits of Franklin and Washington, while the head of Ceres, the goddess of agriculture, found place on the first stamps of the French republic, engraved by the elder Barre, which made their debut on Jan. 1, 1849.—Strand Magazine.

SEIZE YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

Get Out and Hunt For It if It Doesn't Knock at Your Door.

Lots of fellows have overlooked an opportunity simply because they were too close to it.

Don't be like the sick man who heard of the curative properties of the waters of Carlsbad and went there to take them. After he arrived he consulted a physician who carefully diagnosed his case and then told him that his particular ailment would respond better to the waters of a certain spring in America. "Which spring?" asked the patient. "One of the springs in Saratoga," replied the doctor. "That's certainly tough!" said the sufferer. "I live in Albany."

If you're made of the right stuff you'll find plenty of room to create something for yourself in the job you've got. You can grow just as big there as you can in something of your own building.

They say that opportunity knocks once at every man's door. I don't know the name of the scientist who managed to get such a fine line on the habits of opportunity, but if opportunity does announce itself the chances are that it misses many a door, and in some cases when it does knock I presume "there's nobody at home."

My impression is that opportunity as a rule doesn't knock at all—or very rarely. Opportunity consists of thinking, doing, having plenty of patience and perseverance, possessing the ability to size up a situation and having the nerve and willingness to take it.

A NIGHT OF TERROR

Peculiar Experience With a Deadly Mexican Tarantula.

PENNEED IN A DARK BEDROOM.

The Trying Ordeal Through Which a Woman Tourist Passed in a Hotel at Vera Cruz—Awaiting the Bite That Meant Madness and Then Death.

The tarantula is much larger in Mexico than in Italy. His four pairs of fuzzy legs, his speckled bulging belly, his abnormally flat head, armed with vicious nippers and equipped with eight eyes arranged in transverse rows, suffice to fill you with a wholesome desire to give him the right of way without ado.

Owing to the fact that he has an unwelcome habit of leaving his own realm in the tropical vines to make sociable little visitations to the corners of your bedroom it had always been my custom to search every nook and crevice of my sleeping room before retiring for the night. Twice had I seen native laborers, peons, in the agony of death due to a tarantula bite. So it was not surprising that this creeping thing headed my list of the many dangers to be shunned in Mexico.

I had just reached Vera Cruz from Mexico City, very tired, and decided to seek my room early in the evening, which, indeed, is the only safe and proper thing for an unaccompanied woman in Mexico to do. That part of the diligencias in which my room was located was evidently undergoing repairs, for a pile of timbers was included in the furnishing of my apartments.

No particular reason occurred to me why I should investigate this lumber, and, little realizing that it might shelter lurking danger, I flung my weary head on the dirty pillow. But as I lay quietly dozing off to sleep I suddenly heard a soft little noise, which one might describe as a cross between a hum and a hiss.

As a precaution against the many venomous things that creep and crawl even in the well beaten paths of Mexico I had made a careful study of the arachnids, to which class the tarantulas belong. I recognized that soft unostentatious warning that announced a roommate as undesirable as one could well wish.

Cautionously I stretched out my hand to see if by chance there were some matches on the little stand near my bed, with the result that I knocked the unlighted candle upon the floor. That was enough for my mettlesome roommate; he had been personally insulted by the noise, and suddenly in the utter darkness, that black stillness which one feels in a strange room, I detected a sickening odor, the warning of the angry tarantula.

I strained my ears to detect the soft, characteristic click that the male, the deadliest of the species, employs as a fancy frill to his malicious song. My blood chilled as I heard his muffled hum-click, hum-click, hum—apparently not three feet away. I held my breath, incidentally my nose, and lay wondering how long it would be ere I should feel his big fuzzy feet sneaking up the side of my neck or before his

MOODY REBELLED.

Moving a Vote of Thanks Was Not His Line That Night.

Dwight L. Moody during his visit to England attended a meeting which the Earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. The duty of proposing vote of thanks was assigned to him and the announcement made:

"Our American cousin, the Rev. L. Moody of Chicago, will now move vote of thanks to the noble Earl who has presided on this occasion."

The whole thing was quite out of Mr. Moody's line. With an utter regard of conventionality he burst into the audience with the bold announcement:

"The speaker has made two mistakes. To begin with, I'm not the Rev. Mr. Moody at all. I'm plain Dwight L. Moody, a Sunday school worker. And then I'm not your American cousin. By the grace of God I'm your brother, interested with you in our Father's work for his children."

"And now about this vote of thanks to the 'noble Earl for being our chairman this evening.' I don't see why we should thank him any more than he should thank us. When at one time they offered to thank our Mr. Linc for presiding over a meeting in Illinois he stopped it. He said he'd tried to

CLAY'S FIRST SPEECH.

It Began In Confusion, but Ended In a Brilliant Triumph.

Henry Clay as a young man was extremely bashful, although he possessed uncommon brightness of intellect and fascinating address, without effort making the little he knew pass for much more. In the early part of his career he settled in Lexington, Va., where he found the society most congenial, though the clients seemed somewhat recalcitrant to the young lawyer. He joined a debating society at length, but for several meetings he remained a silent listener.

One evening after a lengthy debate the subject was being put to a vote when Clay was heard to observe softly to a friend that the matter in question was by no means exhausted. He was at once asked to speak and after some hesitation rose to his feet. Finding himself thus unexpectedly confronted by an audience, he was covered with confusion and began, as he had frequently done, in imaginary appeals to the court, "Gentlemen of the jury."

A titter that ran through the audience only served to heighten his embarrassment, and the obnoxious phrase fell from his lips again. Then he gathered himself together and launched into a peroration so brilliantly lucid and impassioned that it carried the house by storm and laid the cornerstone to his future greatness, his first case coming to him as a result of this speech, which some consider the finest he ever made.

ADHESIVE POSTAGE STAMPS.

The First Crude Ones That Were Issued by Great Britain.

The adhesive postage stamp had its origin in England as a direct outcome of the postal reforms introduced by Sir Rowland Hill, whose master mind created not only the inestimable boon of penny postage, but the means by which it was carried into effect—the adhesive postage stamps.

At the time of the passing of the uniform penny postage act in 1839 all postal charges were paid in cash (usually on delivery), involving an enormous amount of bookkeeping on the part of the postoffice, which would have been increased a hundredfold when the reduced rates of postage came into force but for the suggestion of the great postal reformer for "a bit of paper just large enough to bear the stamp and coated at the back with a substance to glue the stamp to the paper." I don't know the name of the scientist who managed to get such a fine line on the habits of opportunity, but if opportunity does announce itself the chances are that it misses many a door, and in some cases when it does knock I presume "there's nobody at home."

My impression is that opportunity as a rule doesn't knock at all—or very rarely. Opportunity consists of thinking, doing, having plenty of patience and perseverance, possessing the ability to size up a situation and having the nerve and willingness to take advantage of it.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Not Used to Wholesale Business.

A small party of prospective investors were on a tour of inspection in the oil fields. Having smoked all the cigars previously provided by the agent who conducted the party, they all went into the one store of the village to get a fresh supply. An awkward clerk came up to wait on them. The cigar stock consisted of a limited assortment of stogies, "two-fers," and one box of a supposedly extra choice brand that sold for 5 cents each. The host of the party looked over the stock and said, "I suppose you sell six of these nickel cigars for a quarter?"

The clerk took on a puzzled look, scratched his head and drawled: "Waal, I dunno. We never sold six to any one man."—Indianapolis News.

The Green Sailor.

Mark Twain was once talking about a play that had failed.

"No wonder it failed," he said. "It's author was a greenhorn. He knew no more of stagecraft than young Tom Bowling knew of salloping when he shipped before the mast.

"Greenhorn Tom, you know, being told to go aloft one dark, wet night, started up the rigging with a lantern and an umbrella."

"Oh, he said 'yes.'"

one feels in a strange room, I detected a sickening odor, the warning of the angry tarantula.

I strained my ears to detect the soft, characteristic click that the male, the deadliest of the species, employs as a fancy frill to his malicious song. My blood chilled as I heard his muffled hum-click, hum-click, hum—apparently not three feet away. I held my breath, incidentally my nose, and lay wondering how long it would be ere I should feel his big fuzzy feet sneaking up the side of my neck or before his soft woolly body would light upon my face. It was not at all comforting to remember that one of a tarantula's eccentricities is to find his way to a point on the ceiling directly over the object of his anger and then to drop unceremoniously upon his victim.

It was the only time in my life when I longed for the bliss of ignorance. Would to heaven I had not studied this hideous horror of the tropics! But I had. Moreover, I had seen the awful effects of his worse than fatal bite, whose work of destruction was mercilessly long drawn out.

If the bite of a male tarantula infects a large artery it throws the victim into a dreadful state of crazed nerves. The incipient stages of the poisoning are accompanied by accentuated melancholia, followed by a shattering of the mentality. On gradually absorbing the venom the unfortunate subject reels and raves in a mad whirl until he swoons from pure exhaustion. The tarantella, the graceful Italian dance so often described in musical literature, derives its name from this hideous poisoning.

All this and more darted through my mind as I lay there in the darkness wondering if I, too, were doomed to die like a dervish. As the night wore on the buzzing grew less sedulous. I lay motionless during the thousand years till dawn, which came at last, a divinely soft, blue, shimmering shaft of light, which made things faintly visible. Cautiously I drew myself up to a sitting posture and craned my neck in a searching survey about my chamber of horrors.

There, in torture worse than mine, hung my roommate, four of his legs pinioned beneath the timbers. There he sprawled, a malmed but angry prisoner. His eight eyes winked me a militant "Good morning," and I forthwith returned the compliment with the slender shaft of my hatpin.—New York Sun.

The Easiest Way.

"I want the wages of a man; that's all I'm asking," said the "Votes For Women" orator.

"Then," said a man as he arose to speak, "I contend it isn't a vote that the lady wants. All she has to do is to get married."

Prefer loss before unjust gain, for that brings grief but once; this forever.—Chlid.

OLD WORLD BARBERS.

Their Prices Are Low and Method Some Cases Are Crude.

The barber shops of the United States and Canada are the finest the world and charge the high prices. Comparatively few cities Europe use American chairs, and most of these run their barber shops in connection with men's furnishing stores.

In most European cities a hair and a shampoo cost 6 cents, and parts of London a shave costs 4 c. In some Italian cities 1 cent is charged for a shave and 2 cents for a hair and in Turkey barbers take their tire pay in tips.

Many German barbers make and switches while waiting for customers, and many French barber ladies' hairdressing. Austrian barbers are compelled to serve apprentices of four years on pay beginning a cents a week and ending at $1.00 week before they can own their shop.

Syrian barbers seat their customers in straight backed chairs before wall mirrors and fix queer shaped about their throats. Then they rub with their fingers lather made of cheap soap.

In India your barber calls at your house and shaves you every morning for $2 a month.

In China the barbers carry out small tubs, razors and scissors to the streets, stopping on the sidewalk to perform their work, just as self-grinders do in America. — New York Sun.

Some British Sinicures.

Gladstone was born at a time when sinicures such as those held by Horace Walpole still abounded, and to the of his life he took a lenient view of persons who profited by them. A C. Liddell records in his diary March 12, 1892: "Dined with the hams. Mr. Gladstone there." Some one alluded to the diminution sinicures. Mr. Gladstone said there was nothing dishonorable in accepting a sinicure if it was recognized by the society in which it existed not considered unusual or unwelcome. ### MOODY REBELLED.

loving a Vote of Thanks Was Not in His Line That Night.

Dwight L. Moody during his first visit to England attended a meeting at which the Earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. The duty of proposing a vote of thanks was assigned to him and the announcement made:

"Our American cousin, the Rev. Mr. Moody of Chicago, will now move a vote of thanks to the noble earl who has presided on this occasion."

The whole thing was quite out of Mr. Moody's line. With an utter disregard of conventionality he burst upon the audience with the bold announcement:

"The speaker has made two mistakes. To begin with, I'm not the Rev. Mr. Moody at all. I'm plain Dwight L. Moody, a Sunday school worker. And then I'm not your American cousin. By the grace of God I'm your rother, interested with you in our Father's work for his children.

"And now about this vote of thanks to the 'noble earl for being our chairman this evening.' I don't see why we should thank him any more than we should thank us. When at one time he offered to thank our Mr. Lincoln or presiding over a meeting in Illinois he stopped it. He said he'd tried to do

SOUND BUSINESS MAXIMS.

Use Your Ability and Take No Stock In the Law of Chance.

Most men who have amounted to anything started with nothing but ability and determination, a combination which recognizes no man made limitations.

Any kind of work is better than idleness, which is directly responsible for most of the unhappiness in this world. Idleness is a dangerous thing. It may grow into a habit that might stick to you after you get back in harness, and the man who loafs on his job is only fooling himself.

Eternal, intelligent effort is the price of commercial growth, and where there is no progression there is bound to be retrogression. Business is something like aeroplaning—to stop is to drop, and to drop is generally to bust.

If I had an enemy and wanted to get even with him I could wish him nothing worse than to land in a soft job and get the loafing habit. It would only be a question of time before he or the job petered out, and the longer he held on the worst off he'd be in the end, for there is a law of compensation which somehow or other makes us work in old age for the time we waste in youth or suffer if we can't make good.

A LEGEND OF MEXICO.

Origin of the Eagle and Serpent on Its Coat of Arms.

The coat of arms of the republic of Mexico, which occupies the center or white bar of the flag and consists of a beautiful device representing an eagle perched upon a cactus (what in Mexico is called nopal) devouring a serpent, is intimately connected with the history of the people. In the beginning of the fourteenth century the ancient Mexicans, or Aztecs, after wandering for a long time around the Mexican valley looking for a place to build their city, arrived after terrible sufferings and adventures on the southwestern border of Lake Tezcoco in 1325.

There they halted, for in front of them they beheld what naturally they considered an auspicious omen from their gods. An immense royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty stood upon a cactus growing in the crevice of a rock washed by the waves of the lake. In its talons it held a serpent, and its broad, beautiful wings opened to the rising sun.

Obedying the mandate of their oracle that there they should build their city, they set to work, and by driving piles into the marshes with no other material at hand but frail reeds and rushes the foundations of the great Tenochtitlan, the chief city of the Aztecs and the site of the modern City of Mexico, were laid.

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE."

Bismarck Once Gave a Striking Definition of the Term.

In the newspapers of today we very often find the words entente cordiale. Most readers understand the meaning of the expression, but it is rather difficult to make a translation that expresses the exact meaning of the original French. Prince Bismarck gave a good explanation when his daughter asked him what the entente cordiale really was.

"Well," he said, "it is not so easy to define literally. It means a cordial understanding, but it also has a little different significance. For example: You were in the courtyard this morning when I came from the garden with Nero. Diana was in the yard, gnawing a large bone. My Nero saw her and ran to seize the bone. Then there was a little fight, until I struck them a few sharp blows with my cane.

"After that the bone lay in the middle of the court, while both dogs stood off at some distance and looked eagerly at it. Each dog, in fact, was as anxious to keep the other away as he was afraid of my cane, and therefore neither ventured to seize it. You see, that is what they call in diplomatic circles an entente cordiale." — Youth's Companion.

Thirteenth Century Fire Prevention.

One wonders what fate would have overtaken the captured starter of fires in thirteenth century London, for after the blaze of 1212, which lasted ten days, swallowed up part of London bridge and was the cause of over 1,000 deaths, every precaution was taken against fires. For instance, all builders of houses were ordered to roof them with tiles, shingle boards or lead, and to stop an outbreak any house could be pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards: "For the speedy removal of burning houses each ward was to provide a

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

LOST IN CATACOMBS.

Exciting Adventure of a Paris Geological Explorer.

Paul Philippard, a male nurse in a Paris hospital, who during his spare moments is a zealous student of geology, had recently a most unusual and trying experience.

He had a longing to explore the Paris catacombs, and seeing some workmen employed in an excavation which communicated with them, he let himself down with a rope to a depth of about 60 feet. Trusting to a lighted taper which he carried with him, he started through the underground galleries, marking the passages here and there with white chalk, so as to find his way back. He examined the vaults and the stones, and became so absorbed in his observations that he lost his way. When he wished to return he mistook the passages. He rushed hither and thither trying to discover the marks, but he found that previous visitors had also marked the stones and this confused him.

Finally, his light went out and he became desperate. He burnt his fingers with the end of the taper in trying to keep it alight, and when it went out he set fire to a newspaper which he carried with him. He next burnt the strings of his apron and used up all his matches. Still he failed to discover the exit. Hours then passed in vain attempts to reach

When at one time they offered to thank our Mr. Lincoln presiding over a meeting in Illinois we stopped it. He said he'd tried to do his duty and they'd tried to do theirs. I thought it was about an even thing all around."

That opening fairly took the breath away from Mr. Moody's hearers. Such talk could not be gauged by any common standard. Mr. Moody carried English audiences with him from the beginning to his latest labors.

OLD WORLD BARBERS.

their Prices are Low and Methods in Some Cases are Crude.

The barber shops of the United States and Canada are the finest in the world and charge the highest prices. Comparatively few cities of Europe use American chairs, and many of these run their barber shops in connection with men's furnishing stores.

In most European cities a hair cut and a shampoo cost 6 cents, and in parts of London a shave costs 4 cents. In some Italian cities 1 cent is charged for a shave and 2 cents for a hair cut, and in Turkey barbers take their entire pay in tips.

Many German barbers make wigs and switches while waiting for customers, and many French barbers do dyes' hairdressing. Austrian barbers are compelled to serve apprenticeships of four years on pay beginning at 41 cents a week and ending at $1.02 a week before they can own their shops. Syrian barbers seat their customers on straight backed chairs before tiny all mirrors and fix queer shaped pans about their throats. Then they rub on their fingers lather made from soap.

In India your barber calls at your house and shaves you every morning for $2 a month.

In China the barbers carry stools, nail tubs, razors and scissors about the streets, stopping on the sidewalks to perform their work, just as scissors makers do in America. — New York in.

Some British Sinecures.

Gladstone was born at a time when sinecures such as those held by Horace Walpole still abounded, and to the end of his life he took a lenient view of the persons who profited by them. A. G.

Liddell records in his diary on March 12, 1892: "Dined with the Coburns. Mr. Gladstone there. * * * One one alluded to the diminution of sinecures. Mr. Gladstone said that there was nothing dishonorable in accepting a sinecure if it was recognized as the society in which it existed and it considered unusual or unworthy. Pin your faith to this law of compensation, but don't take any stock in the law of chance; there's no such thing. Waiting for something to turn up in the belief that things are bound to come your way eventually is throwing dice with fate. Many a good dog never got a decent bone until his teeth were gone.—Maurice Switzer in Les He's.

GOLF WITH ANY OLD CLUB.

He Was a Shy Man, Too, but Surprised the Clever Amateur.

He was standing looking idly round him when I came forward to the starting tee at Blackhill golf course. A little dapper man, whom any one would have guessed could not play for nits. Perhaps that latter idea is what caused me to ask if he meant to play a round. I should love to give somebody a proper whacking.

"I would like a round," he said, almost shyly, "but I have no clubs." This was not a chance to be missed. I would let him use mine. How pleased he was in his simple way. Any old club would do for every shot.

"Well, well," I crooned to myself; "if the man is out for a thorough drubbing I am the last to deny him it."

He took a dirty ball from his pocket, made an easy sort of swipe at it, and I have never seen a ball so eager to get to the hole as that one was. His method of attack seemed to consist of one or two iron shots and a putt. I will vouch for it that he deliberately allowed me to win a hole or two. I have never felt so completely humiliated in all my life, yet he was quiet, inoffensive and almost shy.

"You are a brilliant golfer," I gushed as we made for the nineteenth hole. "Oh, ay, I ha'e to be!" he said quietly. "It's my work, ye see; it's my work!"

Why don't those professionals try to look more like real golfers?—Glasgow News.

Knights Templars.

The name "Knights Templars" was first assumed by a semireligious, semimilitary order founded in the twelfth century for the commendable purpose of protecting the scattered and disbanded crusaders. At first they were merely Knights, but after they were assigned quarters at the palace in Jerusalem called Solomon's temple they became known as Knights of the Temple, or Knights Templars. The ancient order finally became so powerful that it was suppressed in the fourteenth century, and the continuity or identity of the modern with the ancient one of the same name has been warmly disputed.

Sinking of the Caspian Sea.

Geologists claim that the Caspian sea is continually sinking. Known to all schoolboys as the largest interior body of water in the world, the Caspian is about 730 miles in greatest length and 330 miles in extreme width. Its area is estimated to be 170,000 square miles, while the area of England and Wales is 58,000 odd square miles. These figures give a clear idea of the size of the Caspian. Notwithstanding its size, parts of the sea are very shallow. In the southern portions, however, a depth of over 3,000 feet has been registered. Our physical geography tells us that the present sea is part of a vast oceanic water which at one time extended to the Arctic ocean.—Westminster Gazette.

The One Speech M. P.

No member ever impressed the house of commons with his gift of silence more than General Forester. This sensible man represented Much Wenlock for forty-six years and never made a speech. One member, Sir Charles Burrell, sat for sixty years, restraining himself nobly. He made one speech only in order to introduce a bill providing that housemaids should be forbidden to clean windows from the outside.—London Chronicle.

He next burnt the strings of his apron and used up all his matches. Still he failed to discover the exit. Hours then passed in vain attempts to reach the light. They were hours of anguish, when he recalled the terrors of miners lost in the depths of a pit; and began to think that his last hour had come. He would die of hunger and thirst, and become, perhaps, a raving maniac.

At this point the geological explorer reached a shaft that apparently led upwards, and climbed to the top with desperation, only to find himself under the cast-iron lid of a drain. He knew he was close to the surface of the street and shouted himself hoarse without being heard. Finally he descended again to the bottom of the shaft and groped about in pitch darkness for several minutes more. At last he came to another shaft through which he saw the light, but it was too narrow to climb. He shouted as loud as he could for a quarter of an hour, and was finally heard by some workmen, who let a rope down to him and pulled him up. He had been in the catacombs from 9 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. He came out in the courtyard of the Val de Grace Hospital, nearly a mile away from where he had entered the catacombs.

Not Worded the Same.

Just as the family was about to sit down to the evening meal the minister unexpectedly dropped in and was asked to join them.

When the maid set the table she had turned the plates bottom side up. Written on the bottom was the name of the manufacturer.

The minister was asked to say grace, and as he did so he reverently bowed his head above his plate.

When he had finished the little five-year-old daughter of the house picked up her plate, looked at the manufacturer's name closely and said:

"Papa, it doesn't say that on my plate."

His Mouth Full.

A certain town council after a protracted sitting was desirous of adjourning for luncheon. The proposition was opposed by the mayor, who thought that if his fellow councillors felt the stimulus of hunger the dispatch of business would be considerably facilitated.

At last an illiterate member got up and exclaimed:

"I am astonished, I am surprised, I am amazed, Mr. Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch!"

"I'm surprised," exclaimed one of his colleagues, "that a gentleman who has got so much 'ham' in his mouth wants any lunch at all!"—London Globe.

The Holy City.

Medina, the holy city, triumphed long ago over all the rivals in various parts of the world which bore the same name, which means simply "city." Notable among them were the old capital of Malta and Medina Sidonia in Spain. The Arabian city was originally known as Yathrib, but owes its later name, El-Medina (the city) or Medinat Rasul Allah (the city of the apostle of God), to the Koran. To a good Mohammedan there is only one city "with a big C."

OF NATIONAL REPUTATION

If our method of instruction was not thorough and practical we would not to-day have as students grandchildren of many of our graduates of 60 years ago.

Albert College

has an enviable record as an educator of the first degree.

Our method of instruction is co-educational, because we believe that, by this means we can turn out broader-minded graduates.

Descriptive, illustrated calendar and terms on request.

Fall term commences on September 7th, 1914.

ALBERT COLLEGE

60 YEARS AS SUCCESSFUL EDUCATORS.

BELLEVEILLE, ONT.

E. N. BAKER, D.D., Principal.

MORVEN.

Rev. Mr. Williams, who has for some time been laid aside from his circuit work, through affliction has had the Rev. J. A. Jewell engaged for a few weeks to preach on Sundays and to visit the people at their homes, through the week. Mr. Jewell's valued services here have now come to a close. The Sunday service will however, be regularly supplied at the usual hours. The Rev. Jas. Lovelace will take the pulpit next Sunday and Mr. Williams, who is gradually improving in health, hopes soon to resume pastoral visitation on the circuit.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

We are glad to see our school teacher, Miss Barker, back again.

Mrs. Harry Youmans, of Belleville, visited at her mother's a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kitchen, Brockville, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kitchen.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith visited over Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Thompson, Deseronto Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Oliver took tea with her brother at Marysville, Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henderson and Mrs. Harry Youmans at Mr. Fred Rikley's Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hudson and son, Walter, at Mr. Angus Macks Sunday evening.

Miss Alma Smith took in the harvest dinner at Selby last week.

Walter Woodcock and family at Angus Mack's on Sunday.

Mr. Earl Sexsmith will preach in Mr. Cook's place this Sunday. We hope to see a good attendance.

SALEM.

Late crops are looking well, owing to the recent rains.

Several from here attended the social held on George Alyea's lawn. Rev. C. G. Williamson was unable to attend on account of an attack of asthma.

F. Adams, Warkworth, who was spending his holidays at R. Blakely's, preached in Salem and Victoria churches on Sunday.

D. A. Vancott is having a cement floor put in his barn.

Mrs. Charles Dolan has been engaged to teach our school.

We are glad to see Mrs. Arden Blakely out again after her lengthy illness.

Earl Parliament, manager of the Standard bank, Camden East, is spending his holidays at Elon Parliament's.

Egerton Kemp, Saskatchewan, has been visiting friends here.

DENBIGH.

Missionary services were held in the Lutheran church in the forenoon and afternoon on Sunday before last. Revs. J. Reble, of Linwood, a former Alberti, of Rankin, who was for two pastor of this congregation, and J. years a missionary among the negroes in South Africa, delivered very appropriate and forcible sermons on the necessity of both home and foreign missions at both services.

Rev. and Mrs. Reble spent a week among their former parishioners here who were all very glad to receive them as their guests.

Rev. E. Goman, accompanied by Mrs. Goman, has not returned yet from Pembroke, where he was to conduct services for the congregations of Rev. P. Kleine, who is away on a vacation trip to Europe.

A DISTINCTIVE COW.

Sandwiched among ordinary yields there are occasional extraordinary yields that make glad the heart of a good cow's owner because he has then the trouble to record her actual production. While the ordinary cow in July were giving their meagre do of seven hundred or six hundred pounds of milk, and twenty-four twenty pounds of fat.

A cow like that is surely accomplishing something. In six months such work she would give as food humanity more digestible nutriment than would be afforded by five average dressed steers. She is giving more back from the energy contained in her food than the best skilled engineer can obtain from a quadruped expansion engine for the fuel consumed.

It pays to feed cows well; it pays any farmer to find out, by keeping records of each cow, just what each produces. In the ordinary way the above excellent cow would be lumped in with the "average" of the district, while she really deserves distinct niche to herself in the hall of fame. Perhaps dairy records will discover some distinctive cows in your herd. Build your herd of select individuals.

INCREASING GRAIN PRODUCTION

Many farmers, when urged to growing fall wheat, have excused themselves on the plea that it did not pay; but it is likely for the next year or two, there will be ready sale good prices for every bushel of wheat grown in Canada. Every farmer should endeavour to increase his production of grain next year by putting into use every acre capable of producing it. There are hundreds of acres in central and eastern Canada that would successfully grow fall wheat. By preparing the land immediately a great number of farmers could so at least a few acres each this fall. The risk is being taken in so doing, as the extra cultivation for the fall wheat would increase the yield of a spring sown crop in the event of the wheat being winter-killed. The land won only be disked or cultivated to prepare it for spring grain.

The grain production can also be increased by ploughing up the unproductive meadows at once at sowing to grain in the spring. This should be ploughed shallow NOW and packed and disked and kept worked until autumn, when they should be thoroughly ploughed again, ready to be worked early next spring. The importance of ploughing the land for next year's crop early this summer and keeping it worked during the autumn, cannot be too strongly emphasized. Those who are now

BATH ROAD.

The threshing is being done in this locality and an average crop is reported.

An aeroplane was seen here about nine o'clock on Monday evening by several of the residents.

Misses Irene Dawson and Bessie Hull are attending the Kingston model school.

C. Main, district representative of the Kingston Township Rural school fair, inspected the garden plots of the pupils of this section on Tuesday; he was accompanied by F. Martin, Sydenham, with his auto car.

School will not reopen here until September 8th, as the school room is being repaired.

Hubert Cliff has gone to Valcartier. A number of the Bath road people held a picnic at Ontario Park recently.

necessity of both home and foreign missions at both services.

Rev. and Mrs. Reble spent a week among their former parishioners here who were all very glad to receive them as their guests.

Rev. E. Goman, accompanied by Mrs. Goman, has not returned yet from Pembroke, where he was to conduct services for the congregations of Rev. P. Kleine, who is away on a vacation trip to Europe.

Mrs. Helen Greer, beloved wife of Mr. Wm. Greer, died on the 25th ult., at the age of nearly 71 years. The funeral services were held at the Methodist church and cemetery on the forenoon of the 27th, Rev. Samson, of Plevna officiating. The attendance was unusually large and showed the high esteem in which the deceased lady, who with her bereaved husband was of the first pioneers in this district, was held by all who knew her.

Wm. Glaeser, of Sault Ste. Marie, who spent a couple of months with his parents has left again for the "Soo."

Miss Martha Stein, of Melville, Sask., has arrived on a visit to her numerous relatives here at her old home. On her eastward journey she also paid a visit to her brother, Paul, at Sault Ste. Marie and to her sister, Mrs. G. M. Merkel, at Ottawa.

Mrs. J. Youman, of Tweed, spent a few days here visiting her father and brother, Messrs. Wm. and Algeron Lane.

Miss Hulda Warlich, of Berlin, Ont., is a welcome guest of her sister, Mrs. Chas. Rose.

Mrs. (Dr.) J. Adams left last Thursday on a visit to relatives and friends at Kingston and other places.

Mrs. R. Meyer and her two daughters, Misses Margaret and Ruth Meyer, of Philadelphia, Pa., who have spent a very pleasant month visiting old friends, renewing old acquaintances, and enjoying a change from the turmoil and noise of city life in our quiet backwoods village and vicinity, left on Tuesday to spend yet a few days at Bon Echo Park, before leaving Canada for their home in U. only be disked or cultivated to prepare it for spring grain.

The grain production can also be increased by ploughing up the unproductive meadows at once, sowing to grain in the spring. It should be ploughed shallow NOW, packed and disked and kept until autumn, when they should be thoroughly ploughed again, ready to be worked early next spring. The importance of ploughing the land next year's crop early this summer and keeping it worked during autumn, cannot be too strongly emphasized. Those who are now practicing a systematic rotation will profitably increase the grain crop next year, and to those who are following the old meadow plan of fallow, a better opportunity was never offered to change to a systematic rotation by breaking up the old sod, putting in grain. It will pay to make use of every acre possibly in producing grain, as it is sure to be needed.

The Reconciliation.

The doctor was soon at the child's bedside. Remedies were administered then the agonized pair watched the fight for life—skill and vitality on one side, fierce disease on the other. What at last the struggle ceased the dawn of day was looking in at the window. Life had won. The child slept.

"She is all right now," said the doctor, shaking the man's hand, who had gripped his, and feeling his grow warmer under the look of his gratitude the woman turned upon him.

When he had gone the two stood side by side at the baby's crib, listening to her regular breathing. Then with accord they turned and kissed each other. And in that kiss the icy barrier between them melted away.—Atlas Constitution.

Heyse as a Prize Winner.

The late Paul Heyse was probably the only man of letters who could boast of having obtained two important literary prizes with an interval more than half a century between the awards. All the world knows that he got the Nobel prize. All the world does not know that his play, "The Blue," was allotted a prize in dramatic competition as long ago as 1857. He was a member of the Round Table of the good King Max of Bavaria, a sovereign whose joy it was to surround himself with men of science and letters.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Good News For Von Tirpitz.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, through the United States Embassy at London, yesterday requested the State Department to transmit the following message: Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, of the German navy, through the American Ambassador at Berlin: "Your son has been saved and has not been wounded."

A DISTINCTIVE COW.

Sandwiched among ordinary yields are occasional extraordinary olds that make glad the heart of the old cow's owner because he has takle trouble to record her actual oduction. While the ordinary cows July were giving their meagre doles seven hundred or six hundred unds of milk, and twenty-four or enty pounds of fat.

A cow like that is surely accomplish-g something. In six months of ch work she would give as food for manity more digestible nutrients an would be afforded by five average eased steers. She is giving far re back from the energy contained her food than the best skilled en-eer can obtain from a quadruple pansion engine for the fuel consum-

It pays to feed cows well; It also saves any farmer to find out, by keeping records of each cow, just what she produces. In the ordinary way, above excellent cow would be uped in with the "average" of the trict, while she really deserves a tinct niche to herself in the hall of ne. Perhaps dairy records will cover some distinctive cows in your
rd. Build your herd of selected lividuals.

If you need a truss come in and let supply your needs—a perfect fit or or money back. All styles at all ces. Wallace's, Limited, the lead-drug store.

INCREASING GRAIN PRODUCTION.

Farmers, when urged to try owing fall wheat, have excused selves on the plea that it did not
; but it is likely for the next year two, there will be ready sale at ed prices for every bushel of wheat own in Canada. Every farmer ould endeavour to increase his pro-ction of grain next year by putting o use every acre capable of produc-
it. There are hundreds of acres entral and eastern Canada that uld successfully grow fall wheat, preparing the land immediately, reat number of farmers could sow east a few acres each this fall. No is being taken in so doing, as the ra cultivation for the fall wheat uld increase the yield of a spring n crop in the event of the wheat ing winter-killed. The land would y be disked or cultivated to pree it for spring grain.

THE FOE OF GERMS.

Tobacco Gets Away With More Than
Than Half the Microbes.

While it has long been known that tobacco smoke is a valuable preventive against infection during the epidemic of a contagious disease, it is only recently that an analysis of smoke-laden air in an East-end district has been contrasted with equally dense air in which tobacco fumes were lacking. These analyses have shown that more than one half of the harmful germs had been destroyed by the tobacco smoke. This fact has unconsciously been the means of preventing large loss of life, as was noted in the recent cholera epidemic in Germany, when workers in cigar factories were found to be immune to cholera, and wherein the victims were mainly from the non-smokers of the city.

Experiments conducted in a cholera-stricken house, one floor of which was occupied with a cigar factory, led Professor Wencke, of the Imperial Institute of Berlin, to the conclusion that the cholera germs cannot endure tobacco smoke.
It was found that saliva containing virulent germs was completely sterilized by five minutes' exposure to tobacco smoke.

It was further discovered that, although the water used in the tobacco factory, both for drinking water and in moistening the cigars, was full of septic bacteria, not a cigarmaker sickened, and the cigars themselves were free of the deadly peril. Determining to put the issue to a drastic test, a few tobacco leaves were moistened with water, a glass tum-blerful of which contained over a million active germs, whereupon it was found that within twenty-four hours every one of the bacilli was dead.

It has been a matter of common knowledge that inflammations of the mouth are fended off by the use of tobacco, and that unhealthy conditions of the mouth can never be traced to smoking, unless the habit is excessive. Now it appears that the smoker in a crowded room is truly a benefactor to humanity instead of the selfish brute some people would have us believe.

Under a Banyan Tree.

The first parliament house of the Boers was under a banyan tree, under which the rulers of the Transvaal gathcountry, and the tree became known as the "first volksraad of the Transvaal."

The Boers call the spot Wonderbloom.
It is a few miles outside of Pretoria,
at the entrance to a cleft in the moun-

Always on Time.

A man who is constitutionally late surprised his friends by leaving the house at 1 o'clock to keep a 2 o'clock appointment.

"Jim's watch must be wrong or he wouldn't have started so early," they said. "He will surely be on time to-day. Where in the world can he be going?"

"He is going to a funeral," volunteered one who knew. "He is one of the pall-bearers. Very seldom are pall-bearers behind time. I have known men who were late on every other imaginable occasion—late for their own weddings even—but if chosen for pall-bearers they always came up to the mark."

Dancing on Talcum Powder.

It has been found by experiment that the best dancing floor is made as follows: Upon the ordinary floor a sheet of rubber half an inch thick is spread; a certain smooth surfaced linoleum is laid over this, and talcum powder is sprinkled upon it every day. The highly polished waxed wood floors of a few years ago are too slippery for the modern dances. The shoemakers soon learned this and introduced pumps with pads of rubber inserted in the soles.

"Please, your worship, I couldn't afford to pay a hartist as could paint applepexy."—London Answers.

Stified His Reproaches.

There is a touch of savage humor in the old time story of a Spanish pilot captured by Van Noort. Becoming ill, the Spaniard believed that the Dutch wanted to poison him, "and, therefore," it is recorded in the explorers' journal, "we threw him into the sea, leaving him to sink, to the end that he should not ever again reproach us with any treachery."

CRUDE MINING IN COLOMBIA.

Natives Used To Pan the Streets of Quibdo For Platinum.

Under the primitive mining conditions of to-day the Choco district of Colombia stands second only to Russia as a producer of platinum. Most of the gold and platinum exported are obtained by native women, working two or three hours per day. They use the antiquated ground sluicing process as a preliminary to get rid of the coarser gravels and then with their "bateas" separate the metals from the sand and gravel.

The batea is a wooden pan, shaped like a very shallow inverted cone, eighteen inches in diameter and three inches deep at the centre, with two small handles or knobs on the rim. The women handle the bateas with great dexterity, throwing off the gravel and sand by a rotary motion and leaving the gold and platinum dust in the common centre.

Another method of mining that is extensively employed by these women is diving into three or four feet of water for the sand and gravel containing the metals and bringing it up in the bateas. This method is usually more remunerative than the sluicing process.

The gold workings have existed for centuries, but little has been done in the development of the district. The river gravels were being washed by the Indians long before the advent of the Spaniards, and this region furnished much of the gold that was carried back to Spain. In those days the value of platinum was unknown, and when the Indians brought the metal down to the Spanish headquarters in Quibdo the platinum was thrown away.

Large finds of this discarded metal have been made recently in Quibdo, and frequently the earth excavated for foundations has yielded sufficient quantities of platinum to pay for putting up the building. The natives were beginning to pan even the streets, thus uncovering large amounts of mud, which was injurious to health. A decree was therefore promulgated in 1913 prohibiting any further washing of earth in the streets of Quibdo.

PASTOR RUSSELL

August 16. — The Photo-Drama of Creation appears to be the Bible Story, simply told and wonderfully illustrated by perhaps the most beautiful aggregation of Bible pictures ever presented. The object of the Drama is declared to be the re-establishment of faith in the Bible. Manifestly it is splendidly adapted to this end. Few can witness it without deeper reverence for God and great personal benefit.

Pastor Russell's text to-day was, "When Christ shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."—Colossians 3:4.

The Pastor began by showing how foolish and unscriptural were many of the suggestions handed down from the Dark Ages respecting the object and the manner of Christ's Second Advent. The Bible declaration that our Redeemer would come again and receive His faithful people to Himself was once surmised to imply that all the remainder of mankind would experience eternal torture. But now, in the blessed enlightenment of our day, we see that the gathering of the Church in the First Resurrection is merely the completing of the Seed of Abraham (Galatians 3:16, 29), whose work thenceforth will be the blessing of all the families of the earth, according to the Divine Promise and Oath.

The declaration that at our Lord's Second Coming He will judge the world in righteousness we once misunderstood to mean that the Redeemer would merely confirm a judgment, or decree, of eternal torment against mankind, the speaker asserted. He then briefly outlined the Divine Plan for human salvation brought upon the race through Adam's disobedience and extended as a judgment to all his posterity. He showed that since "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man," Adam and all his race would have another trial for life—individually, however.

The Pastor explained that in this trial right and wrong, truth and error, will be set before mankind with the full explanation that whoever chooses sin will choose the Second Death, but that whoever chooses righteousness will choose life everlasting. He then contrasted this Scriptural view of the Judgment Day with that handed down from the Dark Ages—a twenty-four-hour day for damning afresh the poor race already suffering from the original condemnation.

How Christ Will Come.

Next was pointed out the unreasonableness of the unscriptural teaching respecting Christ's Coming. The cash demand was good for grades of wheat and oats, but offered were light. Farmers appear disposed to hold all for any advance that may come along. The advances of the morning were well maintained at closing.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Wheat jumped rapidly higher today, influenced by the fact that European need for supplies from this side of the Atlantic was becoming more acute. After a bulge that in some cases amounted to 5c a bushel, the market closed firm at a gain of 3½c to 4c net. Corn finished ¾c off to ¼c up, with an advance of ½c to ¾c, and rations varying from 5c decline to a of 25c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 31.—Wheat advanced sharply again today, the opening for October being 3½c; December 3 and May 3½c. There was no business in May, however. The bulk of pit trading was elevator company's hedging; some light speculative trade. Exports were doing nothing. The advance caused by higher American markets. Following the opening the range of prices was only ¼c to ½c on both months to mid-day.

Oats opened ½c to ¾c higher, flax 1 higher, both becoming steady later at advance. Flax, at the close, advanced substantially.

Wheat closed 3c to 3½c higher for three months.

The cash demand was good for grades of wheat and oats, but offered were light. Farmers appear disposed to hold all for any advance that may come along. The advances of the morning were well maintained at closing.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—A strong feeling still prevails in the local market oats owing to the limited supply available on spot and prices have secured further advance of 1c per bushel, business has been done in new crop for shipment from Port William at 7c 8c per bushel less than spot price. There was an increased demand for cover the cable today and sales of No. 1 C.W. were made to London at 25s 3d 25s per quarter. The flour market active and firm. Demand for mill is good. The tone of the butter market is strong, but demand is rather quiet. Cheese was quiet today. Demand eggs good at firm prices.

streets, thus uncovering large amounts of mud, which was injurious to health. A decree was therefore promulgated in 1913 prohibiting any further washing of earth in the streets of Quibdo.

Silent Auctions.

Japanese auctions are noiseless affairs. In many parts of Japan an odd little booth serves as such a room. The auctioneer holds aloft the object offered for sale in order that all may see it. To the stranger it appears that the object is not desired by anybody, although all seem to examine it closely. Not a word is said by any prospective customer, but a number of them march off to a little box in the corner, wherein they deposit certain little slips. If one's curiosity be aroused by this procedure a Japanese will explain the method of conducting the sale. The bits of paper represent the bids, and when all have been deposited the box is opened, and the highest amount offered buys the article. These noiseless auctions are much patronized by the Japanese.

Where His Love Lay.

He was sitting in front of a brightly burning fire talking to her. After a while he said thoughtfully:

"This reminds me of a grate that I used to sit in front of years ago."

"I can well imagine how you enjoyed those evenings," she responded hopefully, "open fires give one such a sense of home." But he went on talking of drafts and heat and ashes and the hygienic condition of a room ventilated by a fireplace.

"I have never known a grate," he continued, "like the one in the home of the girl where I used to go so often."

A long silence followed, the crackling of the fire the only sound in the room. It was broken at last by him in a voice that had echoes of a dear memory in its tones, "You cannot imagine how I loved that—grate!"—New York Post.

Abelard and Heloise.

Heloise was noted as much for her intellectual ability as for her personal beauty. She was familiar with the literature of four or five languages—Italian, French, Greek, Latin and Hebrew. Her knowledge was remarkable; her conversational powers were brilliant. It was her bright mind and varied learning that first attracted the attention of Abelard. Abelard died in 1142, Heloise in 1164. First buried at St. Marcel, Abelard's remains were shifted several times, but finally reached the well known tomb at Pere la Chaise, wherein also rest the ashes of Heloise.

Economic Crisis in Germany.

LONDON, Aug. 25. — The Frankfurter Zeitung, a copy of which has been received here, declares that the German economic crisis is becoming very grave. At Karlsruhe the price of tea has gone up 50 per cent. The municipal council at Karlsruhe will take steps to regulate the price of foodstuffs.

Dutch papers publish a telegram from Berlin stating that an important manifestation took place before the imperial palace on account of the economic crisis. The crowd, according to the despatch, called for bread and foodstuffs.

with the full explanation that whoever chooses sin will choose the Second Death, but that whoever chooses righteousness will choose life everlasting. He then contrasted this Scriptural view of the Judgment Day with that handed down from the Dark Ages—a twenty-four-hour day for damning afresh the poor race already suffering from the original condemnation.

How Christ Will Come.

Next was pointed out the unreasonableness of the unscriptural theories respecting Christ's Coming received from a darker time. According to these, the Redeemer would come again in the flesh, the only glory of which would be a shining skin. The speaker then quoted Scripture after Scripture to prove that our Lord was put to death in the flesh, but was raised from the dead a spirit being. Our Lord's flesh was given for the life of the world; and all His human rights and privileges will in due time be given to humanity.

It was also shown that since the Scriptures declare that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God," the Church must be changed by the power of the First Resurrection—made spirit beings like our glorified Redeemer, whom they shall see as He is—not as He was.

Misconceptions respecting our Lord's condition have blinded our minds regarding the manner of His Second Coming, the Pastor declared. Thinking of Him as a fleshly being, we were unable to comprehend the Scriptures telling of His Parousia (presence) in the end of this Gospel Age and of the twofold work then to be accomplished. First, He will do a separating work in His Church, unseen and unknown by the world. Later on, He will be revealed to mankind, not in flesh, but "in flaming fire."

Parousia and Epiphania.

The speaker then discussed at length two words used in the Greek MSS. in reference to our Lord's Second Coming. Our English translation beclouds their significance, he claims. Christ's Parousia, presence, was shown to refer to a period when, "as a thief in the night," unknown to the world, He will judge His Church, giving reward to the faithful. This includes the resurrection of the dead saints and the change of the living ones.

After the Church has been glorified, the Epiphania, or shining forth of the Lord in glory, will take place. This will mean a sudden blazing forth of God's righteous indignation against all unrighteousness. Severely awful as these judgments will be, nevertheless they will manifest the Love of God. By the fire of that tribulation mankind will be uplifted and blessed.

This flaming fire in which Christ and His Church will be revealed to mankind is elsewhere in Scripture called the fire of God's anger. It will be for the very purpose of consuming the world's impurities and of blessing all who love righteousness.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $ and $10.65 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week of Aug. 29 were 2850 cattle, 2700 sheep, 2800 hogs and 1000 calves. Supply on the market for sale this morning consisted of 2000 cattle, 2200 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 800 calves.

There was no actual change in condition of the market for butchery cattle today owing to the fact that supply was ample to fill all requirements. A feature of the trade is the continued scarcity of well finished steers, for which there is always a good demand from leading butchers. Demand for the grades of cattle, however, was good, and an active trade was done at firm prices. A feature of the market continues to be the active demand from local pack and American buyers for canning stock.

The strong feeling that has characterized the hog market for the few weeks past still continues. Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; do, common, $5.50 to $6.50; canners, $4 to $5.75; butchers' steers, choice cows, $7.50 to $7.75; do, medium, $6.50 to $7; do, bulls, $6 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $85; do, common and medium, each, $70 to $80; springers, $55 to $65; sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culs, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $6.50 to $8; hogs, off cars, $10.40; calves, $5 to $7.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Cattle—Receipts 20,000; market, steady; beefs, $6.75 to $10.90; Texas steers, $6.35 to $9.35; steers and feeders, $5.50 to $8.15; cows, $5.25 to $8.90; calves, $7.50 to $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; market, steady; light, $9 to $9.55; mixed, $8.80 to $9.55; heavy, $8.65 to $9.45; rough, $8.65 to $9.15; pigs, $5.80 to $8.50; bulk of sales, $8.90 to $9.35.

Sheep—Receipts, 40,000; market, steady; native, $4.70 to $5.50; yearlings, $5.40 to $6.35; lambs, native, $5.75 to $7.75.

NORTH SEA FIGHT PERFECTLY EXECUTED

11 GERMAN VESSELS OF DIFFERENT SIZES SUNK OR PUT OUT OF COMMISSION.

GERMANS LOSE ABOUT 900 OFFICERS AND MEN

BRITISH LOSS, 29 KILLED AND 38 WOUNDED.

Accounts of the battle say it was perfect in execution as well as in plan. Led by the Fearless, a light cruiser of the Amphion class, the destroyers crept within the German lines at dawn between Heligoland and the German coast.

An aeroplane sighted them and gave the news to the Germans, whose destroyers then came out. The British destroyers lured the Germans to the open sea, where other destroyers were waiting spread out in fan shape.

A small engagement followed and then the German cruisers came out. The British light cruiser, Arethusa, after a sighting shot, got her range splendidly, and hit the foremost gun of one of the German cruisers, demolishing it. The Arethusa then fired a few broadsides at her enemy. Her practice was excellent. She hit a German cruiser, which at once burst into smoke and flame, but soon afterwards a German shot did some damage to the engine-room of the Arethusa.

The destroyers, Liberty and Laertes fought a hard fight. A shell brought down the mast of the Liberty. The Laertes was hit amidships, a hole was shot through her funnel, her forward guns were damaged, and she received also a shell in the dynamo-room and a shot aft which wrecked her cabin.

It was hot work, but at that moment the British light cruisers and battle cruisers appeared. It was the moment for which they had been waiting, and their execution was deadly. The first shot from one of the British battle cruisers sank a German cruiser which had been battering a destroyer.

The German fleet then turned and fled in the direction of Cuxhaven, but they were pursued by the British destroyers, which did terrible execution with their four-inch guns.

The German official announcement of the naval battle of Heligoland confirms the British report that the German cruisers Ariadne, Koln and Mainz and one torpedo-boat were sunk.

GERMAN PRISONERS AT NORE.

A British cruiser arrived in the Nore yesterday with two hundred German prisoners on board, chiefly from the German cruiser, Mainz, which was sunk by a British fleet in the recent naval engagement off Cuxhaven.

The stokers and engineers, who constitute a majority of the two hundred survivors of the German cruiser, Mainz, say that the British guns shot with terrific force, and most of the men of the decks of the German vessels perished.

LASTED EIGHT HOURS.

A naval engagement between the British and Germans off Heligoland lasted about eight hours, during which the fighting was sharp and terrible, according to a despatch to The Evening News from Harwich. The correspondent says that this description of the fight was given by crews of the British destroyers which took part in the engagement and have arrived at Harwich.

An analysis of the attack on the enemy's shipping since the war began shows that 196 German and 13 Austrian ships have been captured and taken to British ports, while 34 German ships were seized by the Belgians at Antwerp. The largest German ships captured by the British have a combined net tonnage of nearly half a million. The captures comprise several very valuable cargoes. The value of the ships captured by the British are estimated at $350,000,000.

Wednesday

The fog of war lies densely over the scene of operations in northern France. It covers the third great series of battles between the German Army of the North and the allied forces of Britain and France. The conflict, which will be known as the battle of Mons, took place along a wide front between the Belgian towns of Mons, Charleroi and Dinant on Sunday and Monday, August 23 and 24. The Allies were forced back, and the Germans attacked them again on Wednesday on the new line, thirty miles south, of which Cambrai, Landrecies and Lacteau were the left, centre and right respectively. Once more, at this battle of Cambrai, the Allies, after beating off their assailants, retired to a stronger defensive position somewhat north of the road from Amiens to La Fere. Here, according to special despatches to The Globe, the British army was reinforced by fresh troops, and had three days of rest before the Germans resumed the attack in overwhelming force on Monday. The German attack was pushed on Monday with such vigor, regardless of the great loss of life, that the left front held by the British army was again forced to retire and take up a new line. The French held their ground, and at the close of the day were able to take the offensive.

The battle was resumed yesterday, and still seems to be in progress, with the result in doubt, although there was another retirement on the extreme left to guard against a German flanking movement. The French Staff are of opinion that the German army of the North has lost much of its strength, and that it will not be able to fight its way across the seventy miles of territory which still lie between it and the forts of Paris.

Paris, Sept. 1, 11.45 p.m.—The following official statement was issued by the War Office to-night:

"On our left wing, as a result of the turning movement of the German army, and in order not to accept battle under unfavorable conditions, our troops retired toward the south and southwest. In the region of Bethel our forces have arrested the enemy momentarily. In the centre and on the right the situation remains unchanged."

"HOLDING LIKE A BULLDOG."

"Our line is holding like a bulldog in the centre," said the Minister of War, Mr. Millerand, to-day as he left his office after a conference with Gen. Gallien, Military Governor of Paris. He refused to make any further comment on the situation, but he showed no trace of anxiety.

COLOSSAL DISASTER FOR THE AUSTRIANS.

Rome, Sept. 1.—A despatch from Bucharest, Roumania, says that fugitives from the Province of Galicia in Austria relate that the Austrian disaster at the hands of the Russians was colossal. Train after train is transporting tens of thousands of wounded.

Several regiments were entirely destroyed by the czar's troops, and these are being replaced by heavy drafts from the Landwehr and the landsturm.

It is believed the battle is the most decisive of the whole war as far as Austria-Hungary is concerned. For her own preservation the dual monarchy must win, as an Austrian defeat, it is asserted, certainly will be followed by a general insurrection throughout the country.

The government officials of Austria, fully realizing what the situation means, are straining to the utmost, and Austria herself is prepared for any consequence.

In order to meet the Russian troops with as much force as possible orders have gone forth for an immense concentration of troops. Those sent to Serbia to teach that country a lesson in the art of yielding the ultimatum, are being recalled, as also are those sent into France to aid the Germans in forcing their way through both the lines of the allies to Paris. The Austrian Government now realizes that she needs every available man to keep the czar from wrecking the country.

TWO HUNDRED MILLION MORE AT WAR THAN AT PEACE.

The world has fifty-three independent governments or nations ruling themselves. Of these nine are at war. Their population is 904,559,000. The forty-four nations at peace have a population of 615,591,000. Thus the world contains to-day 221,826,000 more persons involved in war than living at peace. The countries at war and their population follow:

British Empire.....435,000,000
Russian Empire.....186,250,900
France and Colonies.....88,750,000
Germany and Colonies.....79,045,000
Japan.....67,142,000
Austria-Hungary.....51,340,000
Belgium.....7,432,000
Serbia.....4,000,000
Montenegro.....500,000

Should Italy become embroiled, as now seems likely, 31,000,000 additional persons would be affected. The great population of those at peace are Chinese.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended Aug. 29 were 2850 cattle, 2700 sheep and lambs, 2800 hogs and 1000 calves. The supply on the market for sale this morning consisted of 2000 cattle, 2200 sheep and lambs, 1300 hogs and 800 calves. There was no actual change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle today owing to the fact that the supply was ample to fill all requirements. A feature of the trade is the continued scarcity of well finished steers, for which there is always a good demand from the leading butchers. Demand for the best grades of cattle, however, was good, and an active trade was done at firm prices. A feature of the market continues to be the active demand from local packers and American buyers for canning stock. The strong feeling that has characterized the hog market for the few weeks past still continues.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9; do. medium, $7 to $8; do. common, $5.50 to $6.50; canners, $4 to $5.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.50 to $7.75; do. medium, $6.50 to $7; do. bulls, $6 to $7.75; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $85; do. common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $55 to $65; sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $5 to $8; hogs, off cars, $10.40; calves, $5 to $20.

leave, but not until he rose to take leave, after refusing her invitation to dinner, did he mention Nora. Then he asked calmly—"And Miss L'Estrange? I hope she is well?"

"Yes; very well."
"And when does the wedding take place?"

"I am not quite sure."
"I thought it was fixed for the beginning of February?"

"Yes; that was talked of; but we do not quite know yet."

"Are you pleased with the marriage?" he asked, looking at her very searchingly.

"Certainly I am. It is a good marriage, from a worldly point of view, and then Clifford Marsden is so utterly devoted, that I think dear Nora's happiness is sure to be his first consideration."

"It ought to be," very gravely. "But, Mrs. L'Estrange, Marsden's financial position ought to be looked into carefully before the marriage takes place. Marsden of Evesleigh sounds like a grand alliance, but he is a good deal dipped, of course, he may have cleared himself. Miss L'Estrange has no guardian, I believe?"

"No, Colonel L'Estrange, after making many wills, which he destroyed, finally died intestate; our good friend, Mr. Barton, the colonel's solicitor, has managed everything for us, and I have got into the habit of looking on Lord Dorrington as an informal guardian; but he can not, or will not, interfere now, because he, or rather Lady Dorrington, is so displeased with the proposed marriage."

"Ha! I feared so. Lady Dorrington was, I think, anxious her brother should secure Mrs. Ruthven's fortune. This must be a source of annoyance to Nora—I mean Miss L'Estrange—who is, I suppose, attached to Marsden; he is a sort of fellow to please a girl's fancy." There was a tinge of bitterness in his tone.

"Oh, yes, of course! But Nora is no sentimentalist, you know!"

"I do. She is something better. Well, good-morning, Mrs. L'Estrange."

"We shall see you again, though? You will not go without saying good-bye to Nora, and poor little Bea?"

Winton hesitated.
"I should like to shake hands with Miss L'Estrange once more," he said slowly. "As to Bea, you must keep me posted up in your own, and her doings—if you will consider me her informal guardian. I shall be pleased."

"You are very good—you always were good, Mark," cried Mrs. L'Estrange, warmed out of formality. "But you are not going away forever! India is so accessible now; you can come to and fro, and—"

"India is the best place for me," he interrupted, somewhat grimly. "There I have work to do here there are no ties to keep me! I shall come and say good-bye before I start." He shook hands cordially, and left her.

Mrs. L'Estrange hurried upstairs to report proceedings to Nora, who was pretending to read in her own room, where she was fond of retiring, finding the restraint even of her step-mother's kindly presence irksome, in her present overtaxed condition of mind—consumed as she was by perpetual anxiety respecting her own position, and intolerable regret for what she had lost by mere misapprehension, or, worse still, the deliberate misleading.

"And Mr. Winton is to leave so soon!" she exclaimed, growing very white, as her step-mother ceased speaking. "Why does he hurry away?"

"I can not imagine! He seems anxious to get back to his work, and to think there is no place for him in England."

an unwilling fiancé free."
"Perhaps so; but I doubt if Clifford ever undertook anything against his will, unless under pressure of some tremendous necessity; and what the necessity was for his marrying Nora L'Estrange I can not see."
"Depend upon it, my letter is at the root of this very prudent change of front," returned her ladyship. "I feel anxious about Nora, however. I think I had better run up to town and see for myself how matters stand. You return to Chedworth to-morrow. I will explain to my aunt that I am compelled to go to town, the same afternoon, instead of remaining the couple of days I promised."

It followed, of course, that my lady carried out her plans, and, having had a short interview with Mrs. Ruthven and found her brother was still absent at Evesleigh, she dispatched a telegram to Mrs. L'Estrange, whom she wished to see alone.

Mrs. L'Estrange had been out early, having walked with Bea and her governess to a music class which that young lady attended, and doing some shopping on her way back.

The dignified master of the house having gone to dinner, the door was opened by the "slaves" of the establishment, and Mrs. L'Estrange found the telegram on the drawing-room table.

As Nora was not there, and the message boded nothing pleasant, Mrs. L'Estrange went down-stairs at once, and meeting her own maid in the hall, she told her she was obliged to go out again, in case Miss L'Estrange asked, and set forth to keep the appointment.

The bell sounded more than once during the sacred hour of rest and refreshment, but the task of answering was left to the neat little housemaid, whose lot it was to serve more than one master.

Nora meanwhile employed herself in her own room. She shrank from meeting Winton alone, and he might come any day; so, while Helen was out, she kept in her special stronghold.

She had been greatly disappointed that day. The morning post had brought her nothing from Marsden; so, with a sinking heart, she had set herself to compose a letter to him.

She had written "Dear Clifford," and sat looking at the words in a sort of despair as to how she should attack her terrible subject, when the servant of the house brought her a letter, at the sight of which her heart stood still: the writing was Marsden's.

"Has Mrs. L'Estrange come in?" she asked.

"Yes, she is in the drawing-room."

Nora tore open the envelope and glanced at the contents, before rushing to confide them to her step-mother.

"Nora," it began,—"I think I see the relief in your eyes—those sweet truthful eyes I love so well—when you read these words—I give you back your promise, and set you free. There is that in you, I know not what, which forbids me to sham generosity. I give you up, because I can not help it. A tremendous necessity, a necessity I can not explain, compels me. No words can express the agony of bitterness and humiliation it costs me to release you, for I love you as passionately as ever, as I did from the first, when you unconsciously cast a spell over me that has been my ruin. Yet it has been all my own fault. I do not blame you. If I were to write forever, I could say no more. You never loved me, but I should not the less have insisted on your keeping your promise to be my wife. Now I renounce you, and hope never to see you again! You will give yourself to another. She read and re-read Marsden's letter; its passionate despair sobered and dismayed her. What could have happened to make him give her up so freely? She was deeply grieved for him. She strove to compose a letter to him in her mind, but could not command her ideas; all she could do—and she was ashamed of the pleasure she had in doing it—was to enclose the two rings Marsden had given her in a neat packet and address them to the giver—later in the evening she would write.

At last Mrs. L'Estrange returned, looking pale and tired.

"Oh, Helen! where—where have you been?" cried Nora, when her step-mother came into the room, now only partially lighted by the glow of a good fire.

"You will hardly guess!—I have been with Lady Dorrington." And she proceeded to describe the telegram and her interview.

"I think Lady Dorrington is terribly afraid you are breaking your heart, Nora. She feels sure you have renounced Mr. Marsden in consequence of her letter, she is therefore quite pleased with you. But I have a wonderful piece of news. He has absolutely engaged himself to Mrs. Ruthven, and they are to be married soon."

"Then that, in some way, accounts for this letter," said Nora, handing Clifford's to Mrs. L'Estrange, who read it with surprise and regret.

Many and varied were the conjectures of both as to what could possibly be the mysterious necessity which influenced Marsden; both coming, reluctantly, to the conclusion that money must be the root of the evil—which was certainly Nora's good.

Mrs. Ruthven was successful along the whole line she had marked out for herself. If she was a little sore respecting the feelings Marsden so frankly avowed toward Miss L'Estrange, she had the consolation of believing that she was inflicting the cruellest disappointment on that detested rival. Then, she had the man she loved so utterly at her mercy; and this, which would have been pain and humiliation to a woman of real heart and delicacy, gratified her crude love of power, while the certainty of accomplishing the marriage on which she had set her soul, of falsifying Shirley's spiteful prophecies of defeat, filled her with exultation. There was a very ugly, reverse to this medal, but, for the moment, she was able to put it aside, if not to forget it. With her wealth, and Marsden's position and popularity, the world was at her feet. As to his craze about Nora L'Estrange that would pass over. He would find that an experienced woman of the world must be a more suitable wife for him than a mere simple school-girl like Nora.

For several days after she had come to a distinct understanding with Marsden, Mrs. Ruthven denied herself to every one—even to her faithful Shirley, who was by no means pleased with the aspect of things.

He had not been accustomed to be thus debarred admittance, and he scented mischief. Though the day was gone when he hoped to rekindle Mrs. Ruthven's passing caprice for himself, he objected very strongly to her marrying Marsden, who had unconsciously wounded his amour propre, and insulted him by his oppressive superiority. When, at last, Mrs. Ruthven was at home to him, he was in a very bad temper indeed, which was not improved by the careless triumph of her manner. "I thought you were going to cut me completely," he said, when they had exchanged greetings. "Why, it is more than a week since I was admitted!"

"You have no right to complain; I have not seen any one."

more of them—let us part friends. wish you good luck, in whatever way you would best like it."

Shirley's dark face changed. "You are kind, and—and most liberal," said. "I wish our old—let me's friendship—was not to be ended." I took the papers she held out, at twisting them up, thrust them in his breast-pocket. "I shall never meet your match again; you have shown me what can be dared at done by a woman, blessed you are with a heavy purse and potent will."

"And all's well that ends well returned Mrs. Ruthven. She gave him her hand with a slight inclination of the head, and he felt himself dismissed.

The days flew fast, and that fix for Winton's departure had dawned. Nora dared not hope that she held the same place in his regard. Of course, she thought, her sudden change, her apparent readiness to accept Marsden and then to break with him, had lowered her in estimation of so high-minded a man as Mark Winton.

He had called as he promised, to both Mrs. L'Estrange and her step-daughter were out.

"He will not go without bidding us good-bye," said the former more than once, as she began to understand matters without question and grew anxious that the two so heartily loved should not spoil each other's lives for a punctilio. must write and ask him to luncheon or dinner."

"No, no, dear Helen! Promise to promise me faithfully you will not implore Nora, with such a distressing expression of countenance that Mrs. L'Estrange promised.

This last day was bright and crisp there had been a light fall of snow and the grass in the park was prettily powdered.

No exterior brightness, however, could cheer Nora. She kept a brave face, but her heart felt as if it must break; for the moment life was her like one of those wretched dream where the dreamer, all burning to attain some joy almost within touch is kept back by impalpable barriers, vague obstacles, gossamer to the eye, impenetrable to the strivingspirit.

It was, she told herself, useless, unmanly, to grieve so about a man who was evidently resolved to renew his proposal to her. She had begged to join Bea and her goodness in their early walk; anything was better than sitting still.

She talked kindly and cheerful in German to the little frau about her home and her people every now and again falling into sence and bitter thought, and then with the restlessness of pain, she wanted to go home and read; tough book of some kind would draw her out of herself. She complained of fatigue, and they returned to the house.

Nora went listlessly upstairs, opened the drawing-room door, and stood for a moment. Helen was speaking to some one, another step, as she saw her step-mother seated on low chair looking up to Mr. Winton, who stood on the hearth leaning his shoulders against the chimney-piece. She instinctively turned her face from the light, as assuming by an effort an air of composure, advanced to shake hands with him—a charming figure, as the reflection of the fire played on her dark-green, close fitting cloth edged with sable, and a pretty curl of the same fur crowned her golden brown curls. In spite of her weariness and firmly exerted self-control, vivid blush rose to her cheeks, while left color enough even when it was partially faded.

"Where is Bea?" asked Mrs. L'E trange, when the others had bid each other good-day.

"Gone to take off her things."
"I must bring her to see you," said Mrs. L'Estrange, with rather a significant look to Winton.

"He is going, then," thought Nora, too much taken up with the idea to heed her step-mother leaving the room.

"I thought you were to sail today?" she said, taking off her cap and parting the fringe on her brow;
the room was quite too warm, after the cold air, and she drew a chair forward, still keeping her back to the windows.

"I have postponed my departure for a week or two," returned Winton; and there was an awkward pause, while Nora, with unsteady fingers, drew off her gloves and rubbed her hands gently together.

"You seem tired of your holiday?"

"No," said Winton, taking a step nearer to her, and looking straight into her eyes. "I must tell you the truth, even though it may seem bad taste to do so, at least so soon. I am not tired of my holiday, but I wanted to throw myself into engrossing work, to deaden the pain of disappointed hope—hope that, probably,

I had a right to entertain, yet which I could not resist!" Nora was silent. "I may seem a tiresome, persevering blockhead—but, once more, Nora, I offer you my future life! And I promise, with all my soul, to be your truest friend, as well as your true lover! Shall I go, or stay?"

And Nora—the tears welling over and hanging on her lashes—said softly, but most distinctly, "Stay!"
Then she lost hold on herself, and burst into a fit of weeping.

"Good heavens, Nora!" cried Winton, dismayed. "You do not accept me against your will?"

"No, no," she returned, recovering herself a little. "But I have been so miserable and so foolish!"

"Tell me," said Winton, bending one knee on a footstool beside her,
and taking her hand gently in his,

"why did you accept Marsden?"
"Because I thought he loved me very much; and—with a quick glance from her sweet, wet eyes, and a frank pressure of the hand, "that no one else did."

"How was that?" cried Winton—his heart beating fast. "You must have felt how soon you grew dear to me!—dearer than anything else on earth, or in Heaven either?"

"Why did not you tell me so before?" asked Nora, smiling, though her lips still trembled.

"Because, my love, my life, I was afraid! Do you remember, one day, you bid me good-bye at the door, at Brookdale, and I dared to hold your hand closer and longer than I ought?
The words, 'I love you,' were on my lips at that moment; but it was no time or place to speak them; and ever after, in some nameless way, you put me from you, and, virtually, told me you would have nothing to do with me?"

"Yes, I remember it, and I was told that—that you had been engaged to Helen, and were now hoping to marry her!"

"Who told you this? Marsden?" he asked, sternly, catching her other hand, and holding both tight.

"Yes," faltered Nora.

"Then he is an infernal liar! Why did you believe him?"

"Why should I doubt him?"

"Then you should not have doubted me."

"You would not have me so con-

Wealth of Languages.

The English language—according to a German statistician who has made a study of the comparative wealth of languages—heads the list with the enormous vocabulary of 260,000 words. German comes next, with 80,000 words; then Italian, with 75,000; French, with 80,000; Turkish, with 22,500; and Spanish, with 20,000.

Rose to the Occasion.

Even dead men on the stage have their embarrassing moment, as a certain actor who recently played the role of a poacher in a melodrama discovered. The poacher had been shot by a rival at the end of the second act, and the curtain should have fallen as he dropped dead. As ill luck would have it, however, it stopped short when a few feet from the stage and opposed all efforts to lower it further. The audience began to titer;
the situation became tense and painful, when the dead man saved it.
Rising wearily, he said, in a sepulchral voice, "Alas, there is no rest even in the grave!" and glided spec-trally off the stage.—Cassell's Journal.

DEAF PEOPLE CAN HEAR.

But Not the Way Others Do—Feel Vibrations.

That the deaf can really hear and do hear, but in a different way from ordinary people, is a fact that few persons who are not deaf understand. Stanley Robinson, who became deaf at the age of ten, tells just how they do it.

Not only do the deaf hear sounds,
but they are often greatly annoyed by them. They feel sounds through the concussion on the diaphragms of their ears and the vibrations reach the brain, according to Mr. Robinson, through the nerves of feeling rather than by way of the auditory nerves.
A deaf man feels the motion of a passing truck, through the vibrations it causes on the pavement. He does not feel the passing of a rubber-tired vehicle on an asphalt paved street, because this causes no vibrations. He feels the footsteps of a horse if nearby and not on the soft earth. He does not hear a stamp upon stone pavement unless it is quite close to him.

"A deaf mute," says Mr. Robinson, "will be conscious of all the noise in the room which he occupies.
He will feel the door slam, the fall of a ball, an apple, an orange, a key, or any other weight; the footsteps of persons in the room, if it is not carpeted, or if they do not have on rubber shoes or slippers; also the noise which he makes with his own knife and fork when eating.

"A deaf person never feels the sound of a bell as its vibrations are

Pacific Blockades.

The phrase "pacific blockade" is almost a contradiction of terms, but is used in international law for want of a better. It means the blockade of ports of another country in time of peace without the intention of waging war;
in other words, it is a peaceable act of war. Some writers on international law insist that the blockade of the ports of a foreign country is itself an act of war without regard to the motive of future intentions, but as a means of reprisal or of compelling the settlement of international disputes it has become an established feature of the laws of nations.—Philadelphia Press.

Weak In French.

Miss Ellis, the teacher of French, looked at Bertie in surprise, and said:

"I'm surprised that your French is so weak, Bertie. Now, think for a moment. 'Chapleau.' What is that?"

"I would best like it," Shirley's dark face changed. "You are kind, and—and most liberal," he said. "I wish our old—let me say—friendship—was not to be ended." He took the papers she held out, and, riving them up, thrust them into a breast-pocket. "I shall never set your match again; you have won me what can be dared and me by a woman, blessed as you are with a heavy purse and a stout will."

"And all's well that ends well," turned Mrs. Ruthven. She gave in her hand with a slight inclination of the head, and he felt himself dismissed.

The days flew fast, and that fixed wintertime had dawned. Nora dared not hope that she still held the same place in his regard. Of course, she thought, her sudden change, her apparent readiness first to accept Marsden and then to break with him, had lowered her in the estimation of so high-minded a man as Mark Winton.

He had called as he promised, but with Mrs. L'Estrange and her step-daughter were out.

"He will not go without bidding a good-bye," said the former more than once, as she began to understand matters without questioning, and grew anxious that the two she artfully loved should not spoil each other's lives for a punctilio. "I must write and ask him to luncheon to-morrow."

"No, no, dear Helen! Promise me, promise me faithfully you will not," implored Nora, with such a distressed expression of countenance that Mrs. L'Estrange promised.

This last day was bright and crisp, and had been a light fall of snow, and the grass in the park was prettily powdered.

No exterior brightness, however, could cheer Nora. She kept a brave face, but her heart felt as if it must break for the moment life was so like one of those wretched dreams where the dreamer, all burning to attain some joy almost within touch, kept back by impalpable barriers, great obstacles, gossamer to the eye, impregnable to the striving spirit.

It was, she told herself, useless, maidenly, to grieve so about a man who was evidently resolved not to renew his proposal to her. She begged to join Bea and her governess in their early walk, anything is better than sitting still.

She talked kindly and cheerfully to the German to the little fraulein out her home and her people, and now and again falling into silence and bitter thought, and then the restlessness of pain, she wanted to go home and read; a rough book of some kind would draw her out of herself. She complained of fatigue, and they returned to the use.

Nora went listlessly upstairs, opened the drawing-room door, and stopped for a moment. Helen was speaking to some one, another step, and she saw her step-mother seated on a wicker chair looking up to Mr. Winton, who stood on the hearth-rug, using his shoulders against the money-piece. She instinctively turned her face from the light, and summing by an effort an air of composure, advanced to shake hands with him—a charming figure, as the reflection of the fire played on her dark-green, close fitting cloth coat, edged with sable, and a pretty cap the same fur crowned her golden-brown curls. In spite of her will she firmly exerted self-control, and did blush rose to her cheeks, which color enough even when it had totally faded.

"Where is Bea?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Hand, and holding both tight," "Yes," faltered Nora. "Then he is an infernal liar! Why did you believe him?" "Why should I doubt him?" "Then you should not have doubted me."

"You would not have me so concerted as to fancy a man must be very, very fond of me—when he never told me so?"

"While I thought every one must see I was making a fool of myself!" "Oh—if you wish to keep up a character for wisdom—"

"I don't suppose you believe much in my wisdom! But, Nora, will you really come with me to India?—to a wild, remote station?"

"I am not wise enough to refuse! But I can't start next week!" "I should think not. You will believe me, when I tell you, I never loved any woman but yourself, and give me a place in your heart, in return?"

"I will, Mark," said Nora, gravely, steadily, with a tender solemnity.

So, when Mrs. L'Estrange was called back, it was all settled; a very happy party met at dinner that evening—at which repast Miss Beatrice, to her great delight, was allowed to be present, and did good service by promoting general and very discursive conversation.

The society papers soon added to their usual paragraphs mysterious hints as to broken engagements, and the false information disseminated by their contemporaries respecting the approaching nuptials of a certain popular member of society, whose domains lay not a hundred miles from a well-known cathedral town in the Midlands, etc., etc., etc.

Nora L'Estrange and Winton were too much strangers and pilgrims in the world of London to share the attention bestowed on Mrs. Ruthven and Marsden. The noise made by the extraordinary theft of her jewels had given the pretty widow a certain standing in the estimation of society, and her marriage with so well-known a man as Marsden made her position secure.

Little remains to tell of this ill-balanced tale, where, though virtue is fairly rewarded, vice is by no means chastized as it ought to be. Justice, complete justice, is, however, rarely visible to the naked eye; let us believe there is a secret award, which brings unerring punishment to the evil-doer, even though he "flourishes as a green bay tree" in the eyes of his neighbors.

A couple of years after what Nora considered her great deliverance, Mrs. L'Estrange, in her tranquil home at Brookdale, which it was arranged was to be her residence so long as Mr. and Mrs. Winton remained in India, wrote as follows, in one of her monthly letters to her step-daughter:

"You will, I am sure, be sorry that Clifford Marsden had a bad fall, out hunting, last week. They tell me he rides most recklessly; indeed, he is much changed since his marriage. Mrs. Marsden, I must say, makes a capital lady of the manor, and is decidedly popular, though somewhat exacting; but Mr. Marsden is either silent and moody, or in fierce high spirits. He is very thin, and not nearly so handsome as he was. There is a curious, glazed, staring look in his eyes, that distresses me, for I always liked him; and he always shows the utmost friendliness to Bea and to myself. I never heard that he drinks too much, but it is whispered that he eats opium. He is often away, and when at home seems to take no interest in anything. Madame is master and mistress, and people appear to consider her rather neglected by her husband. Mrs. Marsden shows me all proper civility, but I feel she does not like me; and

"A deaf mute," says Mr. Robinson, "will be conscious of all the noise in the room which he occupies. He will feel the door slam, the fall of a ball, an apple, an orange, a key, or any other weight; the footsteps of persons in the room, if it is not carpeted, or if they do not have on rubber shoes or slippers; also the noise which he makes with his own knife and fork when eating."

"A deaf person never feels the sound of a bell, as its vibrations are confined solely to the atmosphere. I think there is no way by which the sound of such an instrument can be imparted to our feelings."

Some of the devices employed by deaf persons to warn them of the ringing of the door bell are most ingenious. One household has a rubber ball suspended from the ceiling of the living room, and the ringing of the bell causes this to swing back and forth. One man has a flag that drops when the bell rings. Another has the bell attached to an electric lamp so that it lights up when the bell-push is pressed.

One deaf man has an alarm clock attached to the foot of a brass bed. He feels the vibrations when the alarm goes off just as plainly as if he could hear them.

WHEN TO CUT ALFALFA.

Best Hay Obtained When First Blooms Appear.

It has for years been considered that alfalfa for hay should be cut when about one-half of the plants are in bloom, says the Kansas Farmer. During recent years the best alfalfa growers have been cutting when they could so soon as the first blooms appear. Such growers are strongly inclined to the belief that the best hay is at this time obtained and also that cutting at such time is best for the succeeding crop. There are two considerations in the harvesting of alfalfa for hay. The first is that of obtaining hay of the highest feeding quality and the other that of cutting at such times as will result in the largest annual yield.

If the crop is allowed to stand until it is in full bloom the stems become woody and a considerable proportion of the leaves are lost in the harvest. It would seem, therefore, that from the standpoint of hay quality the cutting reached as near maturity as possible, but before such time as will result in woody stems and leaf loss.

Every alfalfa grower has observed that just in advance of blooming the crown of the alfalfa plant starts new hay as if the crop had been removed and the crown shoots been allowed to grow without interruption. It is our belief, therefore, that the largest yield of best quality hay will result from the cutting of alfalfa just as soon as these new shoots from the crown appear, provided, of course, this be permitted by conditions of weather and other farm work. To be sure, if alfalfa hay is to be used largely for horse feed the hay should be ripe and so cut later than if it is to be eaten by other stock.

A Bumper Apple Crop.

Apples this year promise a heavy yield in Maryland and North Carolina, the finest crop in the history of Colorado, an unusual crop in Michigan, good crops in Virginia, Georgia and South Carolina and prospects in other states generally good or above average, according to reports to the department of agriculture.

BEES ON THE FARM.

The hum of the busy little honeybee should be heard on every farm. A moderate amount of care given to these industrious workers will help out considerably in these days of the high cost of living by providing a supply of the most delicious and healthful of all sweets for the table. It is especially good for cooking purposes and is far superior to any other sweet for the little folks.

It is not necessary to go into extensive beekeeping in order to have honey for the home. A half a dozen colonies when properly cared for will give the average family all that it can use and possibly some to sell.

Of course if the farmer cared to do so he could easily keep a larger number of colonies and add to his income by their work. Quite often the women of the farm attend to the bees and buy relief from the drudgery of farm life through the aid of these little insects.

In days gone by most of the bees kept on farms were to be found in hollow logs, commonly known as "bee gums," or else in tight boxes with a few sticks nailed across on the inside, to which the bees attached their combs.

The favorite method of removing the honey or "robbing the bees," as it was called, was to smother them by placing the hive over a pit in which brimstone was burning. Then the honey could be taken out, but it would be necessary to get more bees next year. However, this cruel method has passed away, and now almost every beekeeper uses hives with movable frames, and the honey can be removed without killing a single bee.

PROGRESS IN AGRICULTURE.

What is called modern agriculture dates back 200 years. The principles of farming, now generally accepted, began then to be slowly developed through practical experience, through a study of the conditions, especially through a study of the failure of certain farm lands to bring forth adequate results in England.

In those 200 years we have made progress. If we compare the conditions of farm life today with the farm life of 1714 we will wonder at the change.

But 200 years is a long time, and when you divide the gain by the time you see how slow the progress has been.

Necessarily slow. Nature has her own way of working, and she has eternity to work in. Man gains nothing save as he works in accordance with these natural laws. Two hundred years ago we knew little about agricultural chemistry and little that was not wrong about any chemistry. It is the recorded experience of all these weeks and months and years, these seasons good and bad, these reports from new fields, the accumulated gains of 200 years, that have put the farmer in the position in which he stands today.

Let us study all this record. Let us benefit by it and benefit by our experience last year, last week and yesterday.—Home and Farm.

SILAGE AND DAIRY COWS.

A Trying Season Is the Latter Part of Summer and Early Fall.

One of the most trying seasons of the year for the dairy cow is the latter part of summer and early fall. At this season the pastures are often short or dried up, and in such cases it is a common mistake of dairymen to let their cows drop off in flow of milk through lack of feed. Later they find it impossible to restore the milk flow, no matter how the cows are fed. Good dairy practice demands that the milk flow be maintained at a high level all the time from parturition to drying off. It becomes necessary therefore to supply some feed to take the place of the grass. The easiest way to do this is by means of silage. Silage is cheaper and decidedly more convenient to use than soiling crops.

The amounts to feed will depend upon the condition of the pastures, varying all the way from ten pounds to a full winter feed of forty pounds. It should be remembered in this connection that silage contains a low percentage of protein, so that the greater the amount of silage fed the greater must be the amount of protein in the supplementary feeds to properly balance the ration.

BUILDING UP THE HERD

Community Bull a Good Idea if Handled Right.

From bulletin of Ohio experiment station

In communities where the herds are small and the individual dairymen does not feel that he can afford to purchase a pure bred bull for his own use it is a good plan for two or more to own one in partnership. An entire community may own one or more bulls and co-operate in their use. In such cases it will be necessary for the community, or at least the persons operating, to select and advance interests of one breed—that is, but of one breed should be used, whether on grade or pure bred cows.

This plan would make it possible to shift the bulls from one herd to other without the bad effects of breeding the offspring of a bull of one breed to a bull of another breed, and the necessity of disposing of a valuable bull rather than use him on his own property.

Where more than one bull is used association should be formed and the business conducted by honest, competent officers. This association could cover a large territory and handle large number of bulls. In this way the grade cattle of a section can be improved rapidly without great cost to any one individual. The association may be confined to pure breeds or grades or it may include both. Such organizations are being operated in many states and are meeting the expectations of their members.

seven feet above the ground. They are square and have 2 by 4 pieces running from top to top. Woven poultry wire is stretched about these posts, leaving the entrance way open. Wire is also stretched from the 2 by 4's on top. In this case grapevines were planted about the wire so that the vines may run over this in the summer time. Rambler roses or morning glories would answer the same purpose. Woodbine is also suitable for this purpose.

ABOUT MILK AND COWS.

Warm milk should never be poured into cold milk, nor should the night's milk be mixed with the morning's milk.

In order to produce desirable flavor it is very essential that the milk and cream be handled under sanitary conditions.

Some cows are such persistent milkers that it is almost impossible to dry them off before freshening. This should be done, however, for every good cow needs a little rest.

The cream separator is recognized as the most economical method of skimming milk.

It is quite a common practice in washing milk utensils to start with hot water. This is not the best method. In boiling milk a skin forms on it. The hot water likewise hardens this on to the sides of the milk vessel, making it hard to remove. The better way is to first rinse the utensil in cold water, and it should be rinsed as soon as it is emptied of milk or else the milk will dry and then rinsing will not so thoroughly remove it.

Through the use of silos and soiling crops from two to five times as many cows can be kept on the same land.

NEW VEGETABLE FROM JAPAN

Experiments With Udo Indicate It Is Welcome Addition to the Table.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

For persons who like novelty in food and in their gardens an interesting field for experiment is offered the new Japanese vegetable, u. Nurserymen have grown the udo un- the name of Aralia cordata for or- mental purposes for twenty years more, but as a vegetable it is still co- paratively unknown. On rich soil grows to a height of ten feet or more producing a very ornamental mass large green leaves and, in the summer, long, loose flower clusters sometimes three feet in length. In appearance it is much like a larger variety of the spikenard or petty mo- a native of our woodlands.

The blanched shoots of the udo have a characteristic flavor. Properly prepared they are delicious, or so the author of bulletin 84, just published by the United States department of agriculture under the title of "Experiment With Udo, the New Japanese Vegetable," has found them. The plant requires little care and with the same space devoted to it yields approximately the same amount of food as the table asparagus and is ready for use at about the same time in spring. After the first frost it dies down each autumn to come up again the spring, much as asparagus and rhubarb do. A patch of it can be forced each spring for at least six years and probably much longer.

Udo growing is not yet sufficient general in this country for the inexpensive methods of cultivating have been worked out, and conditions in America are so different from those in Japan that little benefit can be derived from the experience of oriental growers. It is, however, reasonable to assume that the cultivation of the udo presents few difficulties. It is adapted to a wide range of climate, as is shown by the fact that it grows all over Japan, but no part of Japan suffers from drought. In this country the udo is done best in moist regions, in particular in New England, the Atlantic states as far south as the Carolinas, in the rainy region of Puget sound and in the trucking sections of California.

In the cooking of udo there is an abundant room for innovators. In experiments, however, one thing must be remembered. When raw the stems contain a resinous substance which gives them a decided and to many persons unpleasant taste of pine. It is, however, easy to eliminate this by soaking thin slices of the stems in cold water for an hour or two or by boiling them in two or three waters, is often done with strong flavored vegetables.

Cutting the Finger Nails.

Cutting the finger nails appears have been the most indispensable service the ancient Roman barber rendered to his patrons. Martius chaffing a fellow who had tried to dodge the barber by using plasters to remove his beard, asks triumphantly, "How are you going to manage about your nails?" And a miser in Plautus collects the price of his nails from the barber to make something out of them, apparently never dreaming that he could save money by cutting them himself.

Community Bull a Good Idea if Handled Right.
From bulletin of Ohio experiment station. In communities where the herds are small and the individual dairyman does not feel that he can afford to purchase a pure bred bull for his own use, it is a good plan for two or more men to own one in partnership. An entire community may own one or more bulls and co-operate in their use. In such cases it will be necessary for the community, or at least the persons co-operating, to select and advance the interests of one breed—that is, bulls of one breed should be used, whether in grade or pure bred cows.

This plan would make it possible to shift the bulls from one herd to another without the bad effects of breeding the offspring of a bull of one breed to a bull of another breed, and the necessity of disposing of a valuable bull other than use him on his own property.

COMMUNITY MAY OWN ONE OR MORE BULLS.

Where more than one bull is used an association should be formed and the business conducted by honest, competent officers. This association could cover a large territory and handle a large number of bulls. In this way the grade cattle of a section can be improved rapidly without great cost to any one individual. The association may be confined to pure breeds or to grades or it may include both. Such organizations are being operated in many states and are meeting the expectations of their members.

A Sweet Little Girl Is Juliana, Princess of Holland.

DEMOCRATIC LITTLE LADY.

Daughter of Royalty Who Is Taught That She Is but Human—Skilled in Languages—Items of Interest to Small People—Puzzles and Games.

Perhaps in all Europe there is not such another lady of royalty as little Princess Juliana, who, if she lives, will some day be Queen of the Netherlands or Holland as it is more commonly known. Juliana was born April

PRINCESS JULIANA OF HOLLAND.

30, 1909, and is therefore a little past her fifth year. As most children know, her mother is queen of Holland and her father is now Prince of the Netherlands, although before he married Queen Wilhelmina he was a Duke of Mecklenburg, a German principality. If Juliana's mother should die the little girl would become the queen, her father not being an heir to the throne. Notwithstanding her lofty station Juliana is much like other little folks. She is well educated for her age, and it is said she can speak several languages; also she is a very democratic princess and is fond of playing with little boys and girls who have no royal blood in their veins.

ITALIAN MARBLES IMITATED.

Benches, Vases, Flower Boxes, Sundials and Fountains Reproduced in Artistic Style—White Enamels Are Used For Arbor Furnishings.

Garden accessories are so much in demand that inexpensive reproductions of many of the costly marble and carved stone pieces of Italian and Japanese gardens are to be had. Garden benches, sundials, fountains for birds and for ornamental purposes, bird houses, jardinières, flower boxes and vases for trailing vines may be bought at reasonable prices where garden supplies are sold. They come variously made of stone, terra cotta, concrete and wood. They add greatly to the artistic finish of any garden.

The ordinary flowerpots are lovely made of terra cotta. The color of this material harmonizes so beautifully with the green foliage of the plants.

GARDEN FURNISHINGS.

These pots are so ornamental that there is no necessity for a jardinière. They have been planned with the idea of combining strength and durability with artistic effect. They are quite inexpensive.

Porch boxes and window boxes are beautiful when made of terra cotta. One beautiful specimen is entirely plain, excepting for a border of Roman medallions along the sides.

Suffered Terribly for 15 Years Until He Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years (sometimes having to sit up at night for weeks at a time) I began the use of 'Fruit-a-tives'. These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives' which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion".

Fireless Cookers That Are Not Fireproof

One would think one were safe from fire with a fireless cooker, but a friend of mine came near having a conflagration from hers, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. She smelled something burning in the kitchen and hurried in to find, to her astonishment, that volumes of smoke were rolling from the fireless cooker. The latter was not in use at the time and, moreover, the lids were all standing open. The cause of the trouble was spontaneous combustion of the "stuffing" between the compartments.

It seems that the cook had not been careful in wiping out the moisture after the food had been cooked, and the metal lining had rusted and so holes had come at the bottom. The heat from the radiators got through these to the "stuffing," and when enough had been stored up in this interior spontaneous combustion occurred, just as it sometimes does with a bale of cotton. The insurance company made good to my friend the destruction of the fireless cooker, and she has purchased the latest model, which is porce-

EW VEGETABLE FROM JAPAN.

periments With Udo Indicate It is a Welcome Addition to the Table. Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

For persons who like novelty in their food and in their gardens an interesting field for experiment is offered by a new Japanese vegetable, udo. Irrigymen have grown the udo under a name of Aralia cordata for ornamental purposes for twenty years or more, but as a vegetable it is still comparatively unknown. On rich soil it grows to a height of ten feet or more, producing a very ornamental mass of large green leaves and, in the late summer, long, loose flower clusters, sometimes three feet in length. In appearance it is much like a larger variety of the spikenard or petty morel, native of our woodlands.

The blanched shoots of the udo have characteristic flavor. Properly prepared they are delicious, or so the author of bulletin 84, just published by the United States department of agriculture under the title of "Experiments with Udo, the New Japanese Vegetable," has found them. The plant requires little care and with the same care devoted to it yields approximately the same amount of food for a table as asparagus and is ready for use at about the same time in the spring. After the first frost it dies down each autumn to come up again in the spring, much as asparagus and rhubarb do. A patch of it can be forced each spring for at least six years and probably much longer.

Udo growing is not yet sufficiently general in this country for the most expensive methods of cultivating to have been worked out, and conditions in America are so different from those in Japan that little benefit can be derived from the experience of oriental growers. It is, however, reasonable to assume that the cultivation of the udo presents few difficulties. It is adapted to a wide range of climate, as is shown by the fact that it grows all over Japan, but no part of Japan suffers from drought. In this country the udo has its best in moist regions, in particular in New England, the Atlantic states far south as the Carolinas, in the Puget region of Puget sound and in the rocky sections of California.

In the cooking of udo there is still undant room for innovators. In all experiments, however, one thing must be remembered. When raw the stems contain a resinous substance which gives them a decided and to many persons unpleasant taste of pine. It is, however, easy to eliminate this by boiling thin slices of the stems in ice water for an hour or two or by boiling them in two or three waters, as often done with strong flavored vegetables.

Cutting the Finger Nails.

Cutting the finger nails appears to have been the most indispensable service the ancient Roman barber rendered to his patrons. Martial, addressing a top who had tried to irritate the barber by using plasters to remove his beard, asks triumphantly, "How are you going to manly about your nails?" And the poet in Plautus collects the parings his nails from the barber to make something out of them, apparently never dreaming that he could save money by cutting them himself.

Notwithstanding her lofty station Juliana is much like other little folks. She is well educated for her age, and it is said she can speak several languages; also she is a very democratic princess and is fond of playing with little boys and girls who have no royal blood in their veins.

A Great Catch of Birds.

There is a certain Pennsylvania farmer who is a lover of birds, yet at the same time likes to raise a fair proportion of fruit, so last summer he was greatly troubled when the woodpeckers fairly swarmed on his cherry trees, eating their fill and carrying away large quantities to their nesting places. Something must be done to save his cherries, and, as he could not bring himself to kill the birds, he invented another method. He noticed that the woodpeckers never flew among the limbs until after they had alighted on the trunk and pecked around for a short time. So he got a lot of poles that were taller than the cherry trees, hoisted a pole among the branches of each tree, rested the butt on the ground and let several feet stick out above the topmost twigs. The woodpeckers soon got into the notion of clinging to the upper ends of the poles before they made a raid on the cherries, and while in that attitude the farmer would run under the tree with an ax and hit the pole as hard as he could on the opposite side from which the bird was clinging. The sudden blow invariably stunned the woodpecker and made it tumble to the ground, and before it had a chance to come to its senses the farmer picked it up and put it into a basket. In this way he captured four dozen woodpeckers inside of a fortnight without killing or even permanently injuring a single bird. Then, when the cherry crop had been gathered, he turned them loose.

One Good Turn.

Willie was wandering through a daisy field the other day when he chanced on a stone. Painted on one side in large black letters was:

"Turn me over."

Willie tried and tried, as the stone was a large one, and finally succeeded. He was all curiosity to see what was under the stone. He saw nothing but another inscription on the other side, which read:

"Now turn me back again, so that I can catch some other idiot."

Paper Doll People.

Are queer little creatures
With such very thin figures
And such very flat features.

They always are dressed
In the latest of fashion
And never were known
To fly into a passion.

They live in a book
Both daily and nightly.
Cut off their heads
And they still smile politely.

Dividing the Circle.

Ancient Chaldeans divided the circle into 360 equal parts because they thought that there are 360 days in a year. They could not prove that the earth turns on its axis 365.256431 times while going around the sun once. —New York American.

Her Choice.

"Can he sing well?"
"Well, I'll tell you. He offered to sing the baby to sleep the other night, and his wife said, 'No; let her keep on crying.'"

GARDEN FURNISHINGS.

These pots are so ornamental that there is no necessity for a jardiniere. They have been planned with the idea of combining strength and durability with artistic effect. They are quite inexpensive.

Porch boxes and window boxes are beautiful when made of terra cotta. One beautiful specimen is entirely plain, excepting for a border of Roman medallions along the sides.

The ever popular sundial is now made of terra cotta, and this brings such an ornament within the reach of all, even those of us with most limited means. There is something about a sundial that appeals to one. We can always tell the passing of the seasons by the appearance of our trees or flowers, but the sundial goes further and marks the passing of the hours. It is surrounded with an atmosphere of romance that always appeals to even the most prosaic of us.

A fountain of any kind will attract the birds. There is no surer way of colonizing them than by providing a fountain where they may bathe and drink. Birds supply much without which even the most beautiful and romantic of gardens is hardly complete.

The picture in this column shows the little fountain on the lawn, whose fine spray cools the afternoon. Ranged around it are the white enameled garden chairs and the curved settee. Below it are shown two terra cotta sundials. The arbor, of circular shape, finished with white enamel to match the chairs and settee, may be covered with flowering vines. It makes a delightful corner in which to lounge, read or serve afternoon tea.

Beautiful Nursery Furniture.

Wedgwood wicker furniture is beautiful for the somewhat elaborately furnished nursery. The woman who thinks that simplicity, even to the point of plainness, should be the keynote of all children's rooms would doubtless think Wedgwood furniture too elaborate, too ornate.

Made of wicker, it is enameled a dull, lovely shade of blue and decorated with festoons of plaster flowers in white, held in loops here and there with little plaster figures. Sleeping baskets, clothes holders of various sorts, children's chairs, tables and chiffoniers are decked with little plaster figures.

VEGETABLE HASH.

Each vegetable must be cut up separately, then all be mixed.

When the hash is mixed bake it in a large pan, in small molds or in the frying pan over slow heat.

Any combination of cooked vegetables desired may be used in making vegetable hash. The vegetables can be used alone or combined with meat.

The hash must be well seasoned with salt and pepper, and if liked there may be added a little minced onions, chives, parsley, chervil or green pepper, finely mixed. The hash must be moistened a little with meat broth, milk or water.

The conditions essential to a good hash are that the vegetables shall be cut fairly fine, but not so fine that the pieces shall lose their shape or stick together—that is, the particles should drop apart when shaken on a fork.

between the compartments. It seems that the cook had not been careful in wiping out the moisture after the food had been cooked, and the metal lining had rusted and so holes had come at the bottom. The heat from the radiators got through these to the "stuffing," and when enough had been stored up in this interior spontaneous combustion occurred, just as it sometimes does with a bale of cotton. The insurance company made good to my friend the destruction of the fireless cooker, and she has purchased the latest model, which is porcelain lined, and, therefore, may not be subject to the same danger. But still we have now got to watch our fireless cookers lest they catch afire.

Cookers which are not seamless lined must be kept dry and open to air when not in use or rusting will inevitably result. Given this care they will not rust out.

The Outlook in Canada

TRULY, it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good. One Continent's "down" is another Continent's "up."
 The industries of Europe are, generally speaking, at a standstill, and matters will be worse before they can be better.

The whole world is looking to the North American Continent—to Canada and the United States—for much of its provisions, machinery, textiles, boots and shoes, beverages, vehicles, cement, brick, earthenware, fancy goods, furs, glass, garments, paper, soap, tobacco, wood products, and much else. Canada must get ready to meet the demand made upon her. We have continued prosperity ahead of us if our manufacturers and merchants rise quickly to take advantage of their opportunity.

It is a time for business hopefulness, not for business gloom.

Roofing Notice.

Do you know why all the leading manufacturers are roofing their buildings with Brantford and Paroid ready roofing? It is because they are rust-water and fire-proof. We are also headquarters for corrugated iron and steel shingles. Call and inspect our line of roofing before placing your order.
